Plan to Pass Lease Bill By March 1 Abandoned

Opposition Leaders Serve Notice They Need More Time for Debate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Plans for March 1 passage of the lend-lease bill were abandoned yesterday in the Senate as opposition leaders served notice that they needed more time for debate.

Anxious to avoid a rift on procedure and a possible filibuster, Administration leaders canceled a morning session that had been slated for today to speed action.

Leaders privately predicted the final vote on the measure will go over until next midweek.

Open friction on handling of the bill was averted in a two-day truce between Senate Majority Leader Barkley and opposition spokesmen.

Leaders to See President

Barkley hinted that a working agreement with opponents of the bill will be sought to hasten action. In the meantime, Vice President Wallace, Barkley, Speaker Rayburn and House Majority Leader McCormack will report to the President this morning on the final steps to enactment.

As the bill entered its second week of Senate debate, with the end not yet in sight, spokesmen of three parties took the floor to assail it as a war measure.

They were Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin; Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, and Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho.

Administration managers of the bill in an informal conference again discussed pending amendments but adhered to an earlier decision to oppose any further change in the measure.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, opposition manager, meanwhile told reporters that if the bill is passed, a national campaign will be conducted by its opponents "to keep the Nation out of war." Wheeler said he would "stump the country" and try to get other Senators to do likewise.

"Will Fight to the End"

Wheeler said mass meetings would be addressed "from Maine to California" and a campaign would be waged on the radio.

Later, Senator Johnson, of California, and Senator Willis, of Indiana (Republicans), opened a double-barreled radio assault on the measure.

Johnson, white-haired veteran of many isolationist battles, appealed for support of the Senate opposition fight, saying: "Our band is small but determined, and will fight to the end."

He called the bill "the logical result of the violation of the third-term tradition.

"With the utter disregard of that tradition, more easily and more

Serb Officers Call For 'Tipperary,' Earle's Bottle Song

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Feb. 24.—A group of young Serbian army officers filed a special request tonight for the sheet music of "Tipperary," following the now historic episode of the bottle battle between United States Minister Earle and a saber-scarred German.

The officers said they had long admired the song and that their interest had been intensified by the doughty American's fondness for it.

The Earle story was the talk of Belgrade cafes tonight.

The Unready Republic

By Duncan Aikman

The Physical Plant

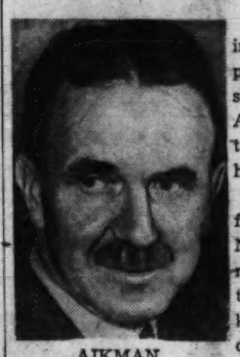
(Copyright 1941, By The Newspaper P M, Inc.)

The United States is a place for living. The American people are more interested in living—more convinced that eventually they can and will live fully—than any other people in the world.



AIKMAN

I have just spent four months traveling 12,000 miles up and down the Republic and around its four immense sides. And this feeling about the American people's feeling for living is the outstanding impression I bring home.

No one anywhere was screaming for "living room," like Mr. Hitler's Nazis. No one was talking of life, as millions of people in Europe are now talking and writing—as if it were a kind of obscene partnership with death. It was different from Latin America, too. When I've traveled in the countries below the Rio Grande in the past few years, peons and sour little people grimly holding on to a cheap, white collar status have said to me, "Life is hard, senor;" as if a sensible man or woman shut eyes to other possibilities and accepted the will of God. Nobody in the United States told me life was "hard" with quite that emphasis. The United States is obsessed with living; with this idea that everyone on our 3,000,000 square-mile sector of a continental land mass can, should

Roosevelt Asks $3,812,311,197 More for Army

3,600 Extra Bombers Would Be Provided In Emergency Fund

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress for $3,812,311,197 in emergency supplemental funds for the Army, including money to add 3,600 heavy and medium bombers to the Air Corps.

More than one-third of the totals—$1,412,261,000—is for Army aviation, while another $915,104,751 in both cash and contract authorization was asked for munitions of various types to outfit an Army of 2,000,000 men.

About half of the total amount represents an expansion of the military program over that previously outlined, while the remainder is for projects originally asked to be provided in the regular Army budget for 1942. Because of "contingencies which have arisen" recently, the President asked that this money be made available immediately.

For "Community Facilities"

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt requested another $150,000,000 immediately to provide "community facilities" in connection with the defense housing program.

"The Government has already embarked on a defense housing program, but that is not enough," the President said in a special message. "There is need, in some areas, for improved streets and roads to carry the increased traffic, additional water supply and sewage systems to service the new structures, and better health, safety and welfare facilities to benefit the new workers and their families."

Annual Output of 3,600

While such facilities are primarily the responsibility of local communities, the Federal Government must share some of the burden made necessary by the defense program, he stated.

The additional 3,600 Army bombers provided in the supplemental estimates would be turned out by four Middle West assembly plants now under construction. Their parts would be made at existing

Strikes Peril Huge Defense Steel Output

Two Walkouts Called; Trouble Feared at All Bethlehem Plants

By the Associated Press

Walkouts of some employes occurred yesterday at single plants of Republic Steel Corporation and Bethlehem Steel Co., and a union official predicted that labor difficulties would spread to all of Bethlehem's plants, which have defense contracts aggregating $1,500,000,000.

A wage controversy involving some 15 crane operators led to the walkout at the Youngstown (Ohio) plant of Republic. Hugh Carcella, representative of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said the cranemen left their posts and some 500 other men quit work when foremen attempted to operate the cranes.

The management said the mill was "substantially engaged" in making pipe for defense projects and was continuing to operate.

S. W. O. C. officials said 88 workers in the electrical construction department of Bethlehem's Lackawanna (N. Y.) plant had left their jobs. They were said to be protesting transfer of four fellow-employes to the coke-oven department to fill vacancies created by layoffs of men last week.

Members of the S. W. O. C. among the Lackawanna plant's 14,000 employes authorized a strike in a vote completed early yesterday. Van A. Bittner, regional director of the S. W. O. C., said actual strike action would be left to the men in the plant, but that it might be avoided if the company agreed to return suspended employes to their jobs

First Lady Likes Duce's Suggestion She Turn Cook

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt laughingly said yesterday she thought Mussolini's suggestion that she use her "beautiful hands for cooking" was "a good one."

When she said she would like to learn to cook, a reporter queried: 'But didn't you learn once?"

"Oh yes," explained the First Lady, "I've learned several times and forgotten several times."

First Mandatory Priorities Put On Aluminum, Machine Tools

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The Office of Production Management yesterday invoked for the first time its power to impose mandatory, industry-wide priorities, and in doing so, guaranteed that defense requirements would have first call on the entire production of two industries, machine tools and aluminum.

Effect of the action, as explained by the OPM priorities director, E. R. Stettinius, jr., is to force manufacturers of aluminum and machine tools to fill all their defense orders before working on civilian business.

Yesterday's step implements earlier messages of Stettinius to the same industries requesting that this policy be followed voluntarily. In letters sent yesterday to aluminum manufacturers and machine tool builders, Stettinius made compliance mandatory.

In the case of aluminum, Stettinius explained at a press conference, the action was necessitated by "recent adverse changes in the facts."

The four principal changed factors, he said, were withholding of large quantities of scrap aluminum from the market, a step-up in the British military program, the necessity for larger working stocks

Reed Urges Civil Service Extension

Committee Asks Inclusion of All But Top Officials; WPA, TVA Excepted

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Staff Writer

Civil Service experts today will begin drafting proposed executive orders which would make effective the principal recommendations of the Reed Committee report on civil service improvement which was presented yesterday to President Roosevelt.

The drafting will be completed by this weekend and it is believed by committee members that the President will sign the order, or orders, within two weeks.

A plan known to have been discussed yesterday between committee members and the Civil Service Commissioners called for a single executive order to make the Ramspeck Act and the Reed Committee recommendations effective. Such an order would bring the jobs of upwards of 150,000 Federal employes under civil service and all but wipe out the patronage system.

It is significant that the committee suggested that the same procedure be followed in bringing Federal employes under civil service as Congress provided in the Ramspeck Act. Under it, an employe must have served with merit for not less than six months and must pass a noncompetitive test. Only one noncompetitive test would be given, and in event of failure, the employe would be separated from the service within six months.

Attorneys Affected

Under such a plan the actual examination of employes would be delayed for months, probably eight months. During that period the commission and departments would get together and agree on the jobs to be continued in the exempted class, and it would also give the commission ample time to build up registers of new jobs that would be brought under its scope of influence.

No legislation is required to put the main points of the Reed Committee into effect. The President was given authority in the Ramspeck Act to extend civil service to professional and technical jobs. The only agencies that won't be effected are Works Projects Administration and Tennessee Valley Authority, both exempted in the Ramspeck Act.

Briefly, the Reed Committee recommended that civil service be extended to all but policy-making positions and those which require Senate confirmation. Specifically, jobs of lawyers, scientists, administrators and investigators would be brought under the merit system. Committee recommendations were predicted exclusively in The Post's Federal Diary on February 12.

FBI Excepted

The committee recommended that "eventually" all Government employes who perform investigative services in criminal or quasi-criminal cases be brought under civil service, but it suggested that no change be made now in the status of Federal Bureau of Investigation employes, "because of the exceptional situation prevailing here and abroad and the part which the FBI

British Legation Quits Sofia, Bulgaria Orders Blackout; U-Boats Doom Foe, Says Hitler

Reports Destruction Of Entire Convoy As Prelude to Great Offensive

By C. Brooks Peters.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—Twenty-four hours after Premier Mussolini in allied Italy had delivered what is authoritatively termed here a "great speech," Reichsfuehrer Hitler addressed the National Socialist old guard gathered at the Munich Buergerbraeu cellar and, over a national hookup, the German nation, for exactly 90 minutes this afternoon.

But when Hitler had concluded his remarks, the impression which remained was that the speech had been significant in what it did not say about the European war and the world political situation.

For Hitler's utterances on the occasion of the twenty-first Nazi Party birthday celebration today were highly informal and unconventional and contained nothing truly programatic.

Chancellor Hitler merely repeated what he had announced on January 30, namely, that this war would gather momentum in the spring, but the morsel of new information which was revealed in his rambling periods today was that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, commander in chief of the Germany navy, had informed him "several hours ago" that German naval craft had sunk 215,000 tons of enemy shipping in the last two days.

Entire Convoy Wiped Out

Surface forces, he declared, had accounted for but 25,000 tons of this total and submarines for the other 190,000 tons. Yesterday, he continued, an enemy convoy of 125,000 tons had been destroyed by U-boats, but, he added, these figures are but the harbingers of what the British may expect in March and April.

"Our battle at sea can really begin only now," Hitler said. The reason for this, he added, was that it was necessary to train new crews for the new German submarines. The enemy, he declared, will now have an opportunity to judge "if we have been sleeping throughout

British Claim Secret Weapon

By the United Press

London, Tuesday, Feb. 25. British naval quarters today promised to meet Adolf Hitler's U-boat "blitz" with new secret methods for tracking down and destroying enemy submarines.

These quarters asserted that the "new secret methods" will be the British Navy's answer to Hitler's boast yesterday that he will unleash a vast Nazi U-boat fleet, built up during the winter, in merciless submarine warfare beginning next month.

South Africans Capture Two More Towns on Somaliland Front

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 24.—Royal Air Force bombers smashed at Italian airdromes in Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, while reinforced British land columns seized two additional posts on the Juba River front in Somaliland and are within 40 miles of closing a pincers movement against besieged Cheren in Eritrea, the British announced today.

"Extensive damage" on the Italian air base buildings in Addis Ababa was reported in an R. A. F. communique issued at Aden.

The British raiders also bombed and machine-gunnned Italian transport lines in the Dessie-Alomata area, damaging trucks and inflicting casualties, the communique said, adding:

"Our aircraft met with opposition, but all got back safely."

South African forces, aided by "Free French" Senegalese warriors, were credited with the capture of Gelib and Margherita on the Juba front, where the Italians have been putting up the stiffest resistance of the entire African campaign.

These posts are 50 and 20 miles, respectively, north of Chisimaio, Juba River port on the Indian Ocean which the British occupied February 14. Jumbo, a fourth Somaliland strongpoint just north of Chisimaio, fell to the British Saturday.

In Eritrea, units of the Army of the Nile thrusting south from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan were reported to have made a 60-mile advance to Cubcub, 40 miles northeast of Cheren and 35 miles from the Red Sea coast.

This column expects to join forces with British troops who reached Cheren two weeks ago from the west and have since been laying siege to that important rail center

House Gets Bill To Ease Excess Profits Tax

Passage Today Seen; Savings Would Reach 101 Million, Experts Say

Legislation to remove "hardships" from the excess profits tax enacted last September in a rush move to bolster the national defense effort was reported to the House yesterday by the Ways and Means Committee.

Savings to large corporations starting with $23,000,000 on payments on 1940 incomes and eventually rising to an estimated $101,000,000, were pictured by Treasury experts as the result of the legislation.

Chairman Robert C. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee predicted that the House would pass the bill today after slight debate, and said that members of the Senate Finance Committee appeared to be satisfied with it.

Doughton called attention to promises of revision made last fall when the excess profits tax was incorporated into the bill granting tax concessions for companies expanding their plants to fill defense orders, and boosting the normal corporation income tax.

Incidentally, it was said that while the excess profits tax originally was expected to yield $325,000,000 a year, the estimate, due to

Matsuoka Asks 'Oceania' For Japan

Island Space Wanted Through Agreement Of Western Nations

By the United Press

Tokyo, (Tuesday) Feb. 25.—Foreign Minister Matsuoka said today that he hopes to obtain the islands of the central and southern Pacific Ocean as a sphere for Japanese and other Asiatic migration through "an understanding" with European nations and the United States.

The foreign minister made it clear that Australia, New Zealand and Hawaii are not within the proposed sphere which he mentioned during debate in Parliament yesterday. The areas to which he refers, he said, include such sparsely settled lands as New Guinea, which now is controlled jointly by Australia and the Netherlands.

Amplifying his parliamentary statement, Matsuoka said he has no immediate, definite program but that, as a long range ideal, the Western powers should realize that Japan and other Asiatic nations must have some place to send their excess population and that the islands of "Oceania" are logical places since they now are largely undeveloped and under-populated.

Japan received League of Nations mandates over former German islands in Oceania in the World War settlements and still holds those islands—the Mariannes and Carolines.

The foreign minister feels that Japan's relations with Russia are so important that he should see Soviet Premier Molotov soon after the present session of the Japanese Parliament adjourns.

Antitrust Case Pivot

U. S. Seeks Ruling Hospitals Conspired Against GHA

By Gerald G. Gross.
Post Staff Writer

Nearing the climax of its case against organized medicine, the Federal Government yesterday asked District Court to concede that the Washington hospitals involved have been proved conspirators against Group Health Associations.

With the jury excused from the courtroom, opposing counsel bitterly argued for nearly two hours a point of law which may be the win-or-lose pivot of the antitrust trial.

Justice James M. Proctor announced, when the legal pyrotechnics were over, that he will rule today as to whether the hospitals, none of which is a defendant, have been proved willing or unwilling coconspirators.

His decision is of paramount importance to both sides. Should he hold that the hospitals, in denying their facilities to G. H. A. staff doctors, illegally worked hand in hand with the District Medical Society and American Medical Association, then the hospitals' acts—under the law—would be the responsibility of the organized doctors as well.

Under that ruling, the prosecution would put on the witness stand G. H. A. members who allegedly received shabby treatment in the hospitals and tell the jury that the indicted physicians, individually and collectively, were directly responsible.

Additional documentary evidence would be submitted which, while apparently damaging only to the hospitals, would be applicable to the doctor defendants.

If Justice Proctor decides in favor of the defense, not only will the admission of further Government evidence be curtailed but, more important, any questionable acts shown to have been committed by the hospitals in their relations with G. H. A. patients cannot automatically be blamed on the doctors.

"The Government holds no 'heat' against these hospitals," said John Henry Lewin, for the prosecution, referring to a charge made by Wil

Former District Man Found Shot Dead in Virginia Woods

Robert S. Divvens, 33, former Washingtonian and until two weeks ago employed as investigator for the Lincoln Loan Service Co., Silver Spring, Md., was found slain yesterday. His body was found on the Civilian Conservation Corps trail 1 mile west of U. S. Highway No. 1, half way between Fredericksburg and Richmond.

Five bullets from a .38 caliber pistol had been pumped into his chest. Police believed a hitchhiker shot Divvens at the wheel of his car and fled in the black coupe, which carried Pennsylvania tags.

Divvens' pockets were turned inside out when the body was found at 10 a. m. Nearby were five pistol shells. His friends in Washington said Divvens frequently picked up hitchhikers and that they repeatedly warned him against dangers of the practice.

Divvens had lived at 1320 Hemlock Street Northwest. He was a cousin of Milton Divvens, 940 Randolph Street Northwest, an engineer employed by the Hot Shoppes. He had gone to work for the Old Dominion Small Loan Co., at Portsmouth, Va., and had spent the weekend with his mother at Uniontown, Pa. He started for Portsmouth at 1 p. m. Sunday.

Poised on Danube

By the Associated Press

Sofia, Feb. 24.—The British Legation today began destroying confidential records and evacuated members of its staff to Turkey as signs multiplied rapidly that the German army is ready to begin its large-scale occupation of Bulgaria, possibly within a matter of hours.

The Bulgarian government ordered nation-wide air-raid blackouts, presumably against the threat of British bombings, to begin either tomorrow or Wednesday night.

German army officers in uniform studied maps in Sofia's largest hotel tonight with mysterious German-speaking visitors garbed in civilian clothes.

Soviet to Stay Out

Nearly 200 villas in the exclusive Bulgarian resort of Tcham Koria, 43 miles from Sofia, were reported to have been requisitioned for officers of the German general staff.

The resort, where King Boris has a large villa, is deep in a forest and almost impossible to spot from the air. It also has good highway connections with Sofia.

The situation and spreading expectation of big developments was made more tense by reports that Russia has informed all the Balkan governments, through ordinary diplomatic channels, that she has given Germany a free hand in southeastern Europe.

Petain Alters Cabinet, Names 15 State Aides

By Lansing Warren.
Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Feb. 24.—A complete reorganization of the structure of the French cabinet was announced by Marshal Petain tonight in which the conduct of negotiations with Germany will be centralized under the direction of a single representative.

The new cabinet will have 15 secretaries of state in which several of the existing ministries will be broken into two branches and a half-dozen new posts will be created. Names of the new ministers will be published tomorrow.

The official announcement is somewhat obscure as regards Vichy relations with the Germans. There will be two distinct organizations. First the government "will centralize the conduct of negotiations;" secondly, there will be a delegate general of the government "who will prepare and conduct those negotiations."

Nothing in the text necessitates that the delegate shall be a member of the cabinet nor even that he shall have headquarters in Vichy. There is already one delegate general of the government who is in Africa, Gen. Maxime Weygand in charge of all activities there. The importance of the new delegate general will depend upon who is appointed to the post, which is one Pierre Laval might eventually accept.

5 Chief Ministries

The five principal ministries are believed to be those of vice president and the minstries of war, agriculture, national economy, and justice. And they are expected to be filled by Admiral Francois Darlan, Gen. Charles Huntziger, Pierre Caziot, Marcel Bouthillier, and George Barthelemy, all of whom are in the present cabinet. The new men will, therefore, take their places among the secretaries of state.

It seems sure that two cabinet ministers—Rene Belin of labor and industry, and Minister of Education Jacques Chevalier—will be dropped from the cabinet. Among the names mentioned are those of Henry Moysset, just appointed secretary-general for information; Dr. Carcopino, of the University of Paris, and Prof. Paul Marion. The vice president will preside over the meetings and be, in general, the director of the execution of the marshal's decisions.

A government statement said Petain is determined to pursue the principle of 'collaboration" which was clearly established at Montoire. That collaboration was founded strictly by the marshal's definition of the terms of the armistice which leaves unoccupied France in command of its own administration and holding the direction of its navy, overseas armies, and the defence of the empire.

Based on Collaboration

One of the essential reforms of the cabinet shift has been the regrouping under a single minister of the services touching the industrial and social economy of the nation. This indicates in a large measure the marshal's conception of the form that collaboration is to take.

As to the appointment of the representative to carry on the direct negotiations with the occupying authority it makes room for the possibility of a compromise that might end the conflict that has been raging between two factions in France since the departure of Pierre Laval.

In the new cabinet the secretariat of information is suppressed. Two secretaries will be attached to the vice presidency of the council and one of them will have charge of information succeeding Prof. Georges Portmann who has officially resigned.

Labor, Industry Separated

The post of minister of national economy and finances will be the key post for dealings with the German authorities.

"It places the ensemble of questions concerning Franco-German economic relations under the authority of a general delegate who will prepare and conduct Franco-German negotiations and will, moreover, keep direct contact with the economic delegates of the armistice commission," the government announcement states.

Other features of the cabinet shift are the creation of a delegate for national equipment to take charge of public works and employment. There will also be a secretary for family and health. The industry and labor ministry will in the future be separated into two secretariats.

In government circles it was plain tonight that there was no intention of changing the vice president of the council and that Admiral Francois Darlan would remain in command.

The Italians, who have been aided by favorable topography at Cheren, were said to have massed some 25,000 soldiers in an effort to hold that key point on the road to Asmara.

On both the Eritrean and Somaliland fronts the British announced the capture of many Italian prisoners and quantities of war material; and added that the two advances were continuing "successfully."

In still another advance, forward elements of British units moving into northwestern Ethiopia along the Gondar Road, near Lake Tana, were said to have reached the town of Amanit.

The British acknowledged the loss of two planes—one bomber and one fighter—in weekend operations.

this winter and who has made use of time."

Waits British Drive

It is a matter of complete indifference to the Reich, the Fuehrer declared, whether German divebombers attack British vessels in the North Sea or in the Mediterranean. Then, with what might be interpreted as an abstruse reference to the Greek-Italian conflict, Hitler continued:

"One thing is certain; wherever the British touch the continent we will meet them immediately and wherever the British ships cruise, our U-boats will be set against them until the hour of decision arrives. If my opponents think that they can scare me with time then they should know that I have learned to wait. But I have never while waiting wasted time."

In another portion of the speech Hitler declared that he is awaiting the offensive on the continent which, he said, the British had announced for the spring of 1941. "I am still waiting for the British offensive. They have transferred it to other places. We must run after them wherever we find them. But we shall find them whereever they go and we shall also hit them where the blow will be the most destructive."

Hitler repeated once again his thesis that Germany had been betrayed by Woodrow Wilson's 14 points. He declared also that Germany had never asked America or Britain for gold, for, he added, "we do not need it."

The German economic policy is not made in the interests of either London or New York bankers, Hitler continued, but in the interests of the German people.

These remarks comprise Hitler's specific references to the United States. He did declare, however, that "today it is no longer possible to build states on capitalistic principles and in time the peoples must spring to life and when others believe that they can hinder the awakening of peoples by war—quite the contrary. Thus they will only hasten it. These states will sink into financial catastrophe which will destroy the basis of their financial power. It will not be the gold standard which will emerge victorious from this war but the national economies and they will carry on the trade necessary for themselves with each other."

Prophecy Not Repeated

Hitler was loud in his praise of the quality of equipment, of men and officers of the German armed forces today than ever before. He did not, however, repeat his January 30 prophecy that the war will be over this year nor offer any comment on Premier Mussolini's declaration that the war might last a long time.

"We stand before a new year of battle and we all know that it will bring great decisions and view the future with unshakable confidence" was all Hitler said. The National Socialists, he added, have been through "the hardest school which human beings can go," and know that immeasurable sacrifice cannot have been in vain "for we believe in a higher justice."

When in other countries leaders discuss armaments and say, "We are making this and that," then, Hitler declared, "I can only say that I have already done it. Above all do not tell me any fairy tales, for I am an expert and specialist in matters of armament."

Hitler declared that he knew exactly what human beings can do and what they cannot do. "I put Germany to work on armaments betimes, but I can also put Europe to work on it and I am doing it."

Hitler then asserted that he viewed the future with the most complete confidence, secure with the "world's best armed forces, the best armed forces that the German nation has ever had."

The democracies, Hitler declared, count upon and have always relied upon internal disturbances to upset the National Socialist state. "Only fools," he added, "can imagine that the year 1918 can be repeated. Revolutionaries are on our side. The other revolutionaries from the type of Thomas Mann have gotten as far as possible from the battlefield. Who, therefore, is free to cause the revolution? I do not know. Neither do I know how it will be effected. There is only one thing which I do know and that is that there can only be a few fools in Germany who think about revolution. All of which, however, are under lock and key."

Hitler reaffirmed the Italo-German brotherhood and declared that between the Fascist and National Socialist revolutions there was an idetnity of interests.

"Our opponents do not yet comprehend that," Hitler alleged. "They do not comprehend that when I once view a man as a friend I stick to him and do not make business deals out of my friendships, for I am no democrat, and therefore no crook."

Hitler finally expressed thanks to Providence that "since this battle was unavoidable it broke out during my lifetime and in a period in which I feel fresh and robust. And spring," he added, "which we shall all welcome, is coming. The time, with it, is approaching again when it will be possible to measure forces."

Convoy Destroyed

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Feb. 24.—A total of 217,300 tons of shipping has been sunk in the latest outburst of warfare against Britain's seaborne commerce, DNB, German official news agency, reported tonight.

In one British convoy alone, the news agency said, 125,000 tons of ships, including an auxiliary cruiser, were sent to the bottom in a series of bitter engagements.

It was assumed the tonnage reported sunk in this convoy was the same as that referred to by Adolf Hitler in his speech today at Munich. The Fuehrer had said 215,000 tons of ships were sunk in the past two days, of which he assserted 190,000 tons were bagged by submarines.

The high command announced today that in the weekend bag of British vessels was a 10,000-ton merchantman, attacked in the Mediterranean by Nazi combat planes near the Libyan port of Derna.

(The Italian high command said that the Germans hit and "probably sunk" a big British warship of "unidentified type" in the eastern Mediterranean. Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent with the British fleet, reported British warships beat off a Nazi attack on convoyed ships in the Mediterranean and that none was hit.)

Luftwaffe units pounding at Britain proper were said by the high command to have effectively bombed targets in Hull for the second successive night. Other raids were reported on an airplane plant in southern England and docks and armament works in London.

It added that a small number of persons were killed and injured in scattered British night raids on occupied regions.

Hitler Claim Denied

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—The British Press Association asserted tonight the Hitler claim that 215,000 tons of British shipping has been sunk in two days "is as far removed from the truth as German announcements usually prove to be."

Nazis Bomb North Scotland Community

London (Tuesday), Feb. 25.—The Germans sent raiding planes over scattered parts of Britain during daylight and after nightfall yesterday while Royal Air Force fliers kept their unceasing vigilance over the invasion ports of Boulogne, Calais and Brest, which were Bombed Sunday night.

The day's activities began with a noisy but more or less harmless argument between German long-range guns mounted on Cap Gris Nez and the big British rifles on this side.

Enemy raiders yesterday flew over East Anglia, northeast England and north Scotland but, according to a communique, the only bombs dropped were on one community in north Scotland, and they caused neither casualties nor damage.

London had a brief "alert" last night but enemy planes got only as far as the outer rim of London and then made for home. Raiders also came over some East Anglian towns late last night, dropping some bombs in one county near London and then vanishing.

Neither British nor enemy planes were reported lost over this country during the day.

Bad weather Sunday night deferred R. A. F. attacking planes from going far field but according to the air ministry, the docks at Boulogne and Calais were bombed "with good results."

At Boulogne, bombs struck one ship and started blazes among the docks and warehouses. It was the sixty-first R. A. F. raid there.

Boulogne was raided for the seventy-fourth time and pilots reported that they had touched off 30 fires. The results of the raid on Brest were not stated. One British plane failed to return home, the air ministry said.

More than ten hours after a German bomb had wrecked a building in a northeast England town, rescue workers who were still struggling through the debris yesterday, heard faint cries. They redoubled their efforts to clear the wreckage and found an 18-month-old baby in what had been a bedroom. The infant was virtually unharmed but its mother and two women friends had been killed.

In a house on the opposite side of the street 12-year-old boy, buried in wreckage, shouted to the rescue parties "I am in the front room." Relays of men succeeded in tunneling their way to the lad whose mother had been saved several hours earlier.

British Newsreel Cheered, Belgrade Theater Is Closed

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Feb. 24.—A British newsreel was withdrawn from the program of a Belgrade cinema today following demonstrations which led to a police order closing the theater.

Demonstrations including frantic applause and whistling occurred at a performance last night. The applause started when the newsreel flashed on the screen pictures of King George and Queen Elizabeth inspecting bomb wreckage at Mersey, England. The film was interrupted and a warning was flashed upon the screen that the reel would not be shown if demonstrations continued.

Despite the warning, other demonstrations were staged and the newsreel was again withdrawn. After five minutes the house lights were turned on and it was announced that the police had ordered the theater to be cleared. The audience was ushered out, protesting.

Scientist Killed On War Mission

DR. SIR FREDERICK GRANT BANTING,

Banting Killed In Plane Crash On Secret Duty

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—Sir Frederick Grant Banting, co-discoverer of insulin, was killed along with two other men in a military plane that crashed in the snowy wastes of Newfoundland last Friday while en route on a secret war mission to Britain, it became known tonight.

Of the four in the plane, only the pilot, Joseph Creighton Mackey, of Kansas City, survived.

He traced out in the drifts a terse message telling of the deaths of Sir Frederick and the others, so that searchers who sighted the wreckage from the air knew the extent of the tragedy before a ski plane could land.

The secrecy surrounding the flight was cleared only to the extent by a statement by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King that Sir Frederick "was proceeding to Britain on a mission of high national and scientific importance."

The dead, besides Sir Frederick, were Navigator William Bird, of England, and William Snailham, of Bedford, Nova Scotia.

Sir Frederick, whose research won him a knighthood and the Nobel Prize, was first reported lost only last night.

Defense Minister J. L. Ralston announced the tragedy early tonight to the House of Commons. Details were not made available, but it was disclosed that Sir Frederick was on active duty as a major in the Canadian army, engaged in research into aviation medicine.

The plane was on a direct route from Canada to Botwood, Newfoundland, famed in the past as take-off point for transatlantic planes.

Bulgaria Orders National Blackout

Balkan army begins its occupation.

Rendel last week warned Bulgaria in a statement that it might find itself at war with Britain if the Germans were allowed to occupy the country.

Most of the confidential files of the legation have been destroyed and a large truck loaded with files, en route to Istanbul, pulled away from the legation during the day.

The wives of most of the legation staff already have departed and the others are preparing to follow without delay.

(Balkan reports said that the Germans were steadily throwing more pontoon bridges across the Danube between Rumania and Bulgaria, preparatory to a military movement.

(In Budapest, travelers from Bulgaria reported that the German Todt organization—which built the famous Westwall—was directing a "feverish overhauling" of the Bulgarian highway system aided by Bulgarian labor battalions.

(The Bulgarian highways were said to be in bad condition and it was significant, it was said, that the main north-south highways were being overhauled.)

Leftists Rounded Up

Bulgarian police meanwhile carried out a roundup of leftist Agrarians and others accused of spreading "unrest" and complaints against Germany's military moves in the Balkans.

Eight Bulgarians have been interned "in the interests of the security of the state," it was announced, including four identified as leftist Agrarians and leaders of the Macedonian government.

It was rumored that 70 or more lesser-known leftists had been placed in concentration camps but this was denied in official quarters. George Dimitroff, an Agrarian leader, was said to have fled the country to escape arrest.

20,000 Italians Taken in War, Greeks Claim

By J. Reilly O'Sullivan
Associated Press Staff Writer

Athens, Feb. 24.—The Greek army in almost four months of war has captured 20,000 Italians and "will not cease fighting until the Italians are out of Albania," a government spokesman said tonight.

The captured Italians included 551 officers, the spokesman said.

The statement was a detailed reply to the speech Sunday by Premier Mussolini, who represented Greek losses as heavy and claimed Italy's losses were "a few thousands, mostly wounded."

To this the Greek spokesman said: "Of the 20,000 prisoners only 28 officers and 497 men are under treatment in our hospitals, either for wounds or illness."

Regarding the accusation that the Greeks have been making far-fetched claims of success, he declared "our communiques always are very simple and laconic and there have been complaints that they do not give details."

"Mussolini gives as the reason for his aggression against Greece that this country alone did not renounce the British guarantee. Mussolini also said the Greeks were inspired by a spirit of hatred for the Italians.

"We do not hate. What we do is to defend ourselves and we will not cease fighting until the Italians are out of Albania. We wish to remain free.

"Mussolini maintains that Greek victories are only of a tactical nature. One must admit the Italians had prepared this attack for a long time when Greece was a neutral country anxious to avoid being involved in war.

"Of course we had called up a small number of men.

"Despite the unequal situation between Greece and Italy and the Italian superiority in armament, etc., we have been able to wreck Italian plans to assume and maintain the initiative of operations."

"It is a mistake to assert our successes in the Pindus, Morosk and Kamia were of a tactical order. On the contrary, these successes were of a considerable strategic importance.

"Mussolini claims the Greeks suffered very heavy losses to obtain these successes. Our losses have not been serious but rather slight if one takes into consideration the way we've been forced to fight on these mountains.

"On the other hand the Italians sustained terrific losses during counter-attacks. The battlefield each time was littered with Italian dead and wounded."

British Troop Landing Now In Salonika Believed Refused

By Jack Lait
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Feb. 24.—Greece tonight was authoritatively understood to have turned down an offer to land British troops in the Saloniki district immediately in order to help defend that strategic area against an anticipated German attack.

The Greek Minister in London, Charlambos Simopulos, was reported to have told Prime Minister Churchill today that Greece does not desire the landing of British army forces on her mainland territory until and unless she is actually invaded by the Germans.

This interview climaxed a series of talks Churchill conducted during the day with foreign envoys.

In a conference with Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu, the premier was understood to have strongly restated Britain's opposition—and, inferentially, the parallel opposition of the United States—to any expansion southward by Japan in the direction of Singapore and the Dutch East Indies.

Acting in the absence of Foreign Secretary Eden who is now in Cairo, Churchill handed the Japanese Ambassador a written reply to inquiries recently received from Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka.

Churchill also received the Turkish Ambassador, Dr. Rustu Aras, from whom he was said to have asked further clarification of Turkey's attitude in the event of a German invasion of Greece and in view of the week-old Turko-Bulgarian nonaggression agreement.

It was understood Simopulos outlined in detail the military preparations Greece has made to resist any German thrust.

When he declared Greece does not want British troops landed before an actual Nazi invasion, he was reminded by Churchill of a similar attitude that had been taken by Holland and Belgium and what happened to those countries when the German juggernaut rolled over them last spring.

Simopulos, however, rejected this hint, pointing to the geographic differences between Greece and the Low Countries. He voiced confidence that the mountainous terrain of northeast Greece and southwest Bulgaria would render highly improbable any lightning penetration of Greek territory

From this it appeared that Greece still held some hope that a German blow through Bulgaria to outflank the Greek forces in Albania might yet somehow be averted.

Rejection Expected On Vichy Request For U. S. Planes

A request by Admiral Darlan, vice premier of the Vichy government, through Admiral Leahy, American Ambassador, for American fighting planes to strengthen Indo-China's defenses, is certain to be turned down here, it was indicated in informed quarters yesterday. Officials here see no chance of American planes being supplied to France when more than 100 American airplanes are deteriorating in Martinique, where they have been held since last June.

The French are known to have been anxious to ship these craft to Indo-China, but the Compiegne armistice prohibited sending any airplanes or war materials out of French territories and any such move would require the approval of the Germans.

Thai-French Row Near End, Says Tokyo

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, (Tuesday) Feb. 25.—Koh Ishii, spokesman of the Cabinet Information Bureau, announced today that an agreement was "near at hand" in the Japanese mediation of the conflict between Thailand and French Indo-China.

He gave no details of the proposals under consideration or the sort of settlement expected, but deplored newspaper reports from Saigon to the effect that fighting might be resumed. In view of the continuing peace negotiations and yesterday's 10-day extension of the armistice to March 7, these reports obviously exaggerated the situation, he said.

Extension of the truce, the second since it was signed January 31 aboard a Japanese cruiser off Saigon, Indo-China, was said to have been suggested by the Japanese because of "some points requiring further consultation."

Predictions that fighting ultimately would be resumed emanated from official sources in Saigon.

They said that Japan was likely to make a renewed effort to arrange a settlement "since failure would be an irretrievable loss of face for a country pretending to occupy a dominant position in the Western Pacific," but that it was "virutally hopeless."

Reported Thai demands for all the Indo-China provinces of Laos and Cambodia were described in the French colony as "exorbitant" and even Jauanese counterproposals were called "unreasonable." Indo-China is said to have offered to cede a tenth of the two disputed provinces.

In Bangkok, United States Minister Hugh G. Grant announced that the 200 American citizens in Thailand had been advised to leave for home unless they have compelling reasons for remaining.

Contradictory to reports from Tokyo, a deal for Indo-China to sell 700,000 tons of rice to Japan was reported in Saigon to have collapsed. The French government at Vichy, it was explained, rejected Japan's offer to pay in yen, although it was acceptable to colonial officials.

A Domei (Japanese news agency) radio report from Tokyo, heard in New York, said Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka had told the lower House of the Japanese Diet that the rice deal had been concluded and already was in effect.

Legation Can't Find Nazi, Reported Dying After Earle Hit Him

By the Associated Press

Sofia, Feb. 24.—Officials of the United States Legation said tonight they were trying to track down repeated reports that a German injured by Minister George H. Earle is dying of a fractured skull.

A check of hotels and hospitals failed to disclose any trace of the man.

He and Earle engaged in an altercation at a restaurant near the legation early yesterday over the orchestra's playing of "Tipperary" at the American envoy's request.

A spokesman for the German Legation said it had been established that the man was not "a member of the legation staff or a German officer, and therefore he must have been a private citizen." He added that the German Legation was conducting its own investigation.

Earle himself said he had received one report that the man was dying of a skull fracture. He said the best information he had been able to obtain was that the man was a member of the German general staff.

"Strange Secrecy"

He said that "one of the officers who had recently filtered from Rumania into Bulgaria in civilian clothes" had been shipped by German officials back to Bucharest. Earle added that the German Legation had declined to disclose the man's name and was "maintaining strange secrecy."

The official German news agency, DNB, issued a version of the affair in which it said Earle was responsible for the fight and charged that this was Earle's "fourth barroom brawl" in the Balkans.

The news agency did not elaborate this point but some months ago Earle and a German engaged in a scuffle on the dance floor at Budapest's famed Arizona Night Club and the management telephoned officials of the American Legion at the Hungarian capital.

Once before Earle tangled with a German at Sofia, at the Etoile Night Club, and Earle said he had been informed by Bulgarian officials that police investigation disclosed "I was the victim of unwarranted aggression in which I was in no way to blame and that I had been exonerated from all responsibility."

Statement Issued

The former Governor of Pennsylvania suffered a forearm bruise in yesterday's altercation. He confined himself to his office, in which he keeps a tame leopard, and to his home. He said he had taken no special steps to protect himself.

Supplementing an early press conference account of the incident, Earle gave the Associated Press the following signed statement:

"While I was in a Sofia restaurant with two American newspapermen, I asked the orchestra to play 'Tipperary,' a song I always have liked very much. The orchestra did so. Many people joined in singing the song.

"A German at a table not far from mine protested very furiously and in a very animated way to the restaurant proprietor.

"About that time I had to go to the washroom. As I passed this German's table he suddenly growled at me:

"'What do you mean by ordering the orchestra to play that tune? Don't you realize it is against Germany?'

"His face was livid with rage. I tried to hold my temper. I replied as courteously as I could that I liked the tune, that Bulgaria was a neutral country, that I intended to do and say what I pleased.

"His face became contorted with anger. Then he reached for an empty wine bottle on his table. I quickly stepped back and threw up my hands to protect myself. I was not afraid of being hit, but I have always, in polo accidents and plane crackups, had a fear of losing my eyesight.

"The bottle, which the German threw at close range, struck me on the forearm. A bruise which later appeared was more than 6 inches long.

"This sudden, vicious, unprovoked attack irritated me considerably. I also faced the necessity of defending myself against further vicious attacks, so I smashed him in the face, knocking him down and causing his face to bleed.

"My friends, at this point suddenly grabbed me and pushed me into a small adjoining room. All Bulgarians present also rallied to my side and helped protect me. The German was joined by a great many other Germans in civilian clothes, who rushed to his side from various parts of the restaurant. They made many attempts to charge through the wall of Bulgarians standing in front of me, but each time without success.

"It was one hour later that order finally was reestablished enough so we could leave the restaurant and go to the American Legation.

Welles Noncommittal

Copyright by New York Times

American Minister to Bulgaria Earle reported to the State Department yesterday that the bottle-throwing incident was "regrettable" but he "saw no other course" to follow.

Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, had no comment to make.

In the House, Representative August H. Andresen, of Minnesota, asked whether the $10 Earle is reported to have given the orchestra to play "Tipperary" would be regarded as a legitimate expense to be paid by the State Department.

Commended By Pennsylvanians

Ebensburg, Pa., Feb. 24 (AP).—At a cost of more than $10 the four Cambria County judges and nine other officials in the courthouse today radioed their commendations to George Earle for his Sofia encounter.

"Congratulations on live spunk and dead aim," stated the radiogram.

Plan to Pass Aid Bill Mar. 1 Abandoned

readily have come other encroachments," Johnson said, "until we find in all its naked deformity this bill, a mere bill to confer dictatorial powers, to permit the President to play his role in the world with power politics, with a sword in one hand and the dove of peace in the other."

Bill Would "Mean Dictatorship"

Senator Willis, speaking over another network, charged the bill would "mean dictatorship even if the President does not desire it and I am willing to believe that he does not."

Willis pledged himself, if the bill becomes law, to "with all my strength uphold its declared objective to promote the defense of the United States."

He said that out of 24,000 letters he has received on the bill, only 482 favor its passage.

Barkley's decison to call off an 11 a. m. session today followed sharp protests by opponents of the bill against alleged "hurry-up" tactics.

Session Lasts Until 6:30

Nonetheless the majority leader held the Senate in session until 6:30 p. m. to permit clearance of the third opposition speech of the day.

The Administration was represented as anxious to avoid any ill-feeling over handling of the legislation or friction in debate that might mar a united national effort once the bill is law.

Leaders have the votes to pass the bill, but are themselves opposed to a legislative show of force.

Tomorrow or next day, as the speeches near a close, they will propose a new agreement expected to fix a definite day for a vote—possibly Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

Modifying Proposals Studied

Four major efforts to amend the bill were examined by bill managers for possible compromise ground. Tentative decision was to accept none, but to stand by the bill as drawn.

Modifying proposals were:

By Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, to provide that the bill gives the President "no additional power" to send land or naval forces overseas.

By Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, to prohibit disposal by loan or lease of any ships in the naval establishment.

By Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, to specifically name the countries for which aid is destined.

By Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, to designate a special Congressional joint committee to consult with the President from time to time on national defense.

Leaders said the amendments would weaken the bill without materially reducing the votes against it.

Four-Word Indictment

Throughout the day, Clark, La Follette and Danaher in the Senate had hammered out the opposition's four-word indictment of the measure:

"This bill means war."

Reading a 37-page prepared speech, the short, swarthy La Follette said the bill would give the President power "to create a state of war, leaving only to Congress the permission to say 'Ja' with a formal declaration of war."

"I urge that we stop misleading the valiant defenders of Britain. Greece and China into thinking we are going to war, or stop misleading the American people into thinking that we are not going to war," said La Follette.

Opposing war entry as his father before him, "Young Bob" argued that Britain was not fighting America's battle and that this country should devote its efforts to preservation of its "four freedoms," to home defense, to solving the Nation's social ills and to preparing to meet postwar dislocations.

Urges Rejection of Bill

"In short, I urge that we reject this bill and resume the job we dropped a year ago, that we throw everything we have into accepting the awe-inspiring challenge of our time," La Follette concluded.

"I urge this because in the long pull, such a course will not only preserve the American way of life, but will liberate us from fear and doubt and impoverishment. In this way and in this way only will we be able to blaze a trail which the war-weary, blood-sick peoples of the world can follow on their long journey toward peace and prosperity."

Senator Danaher argued that the bill violates international law "as we understand it" and that the Kellogg-Briand pact did not waive these requirements as applied against a violator of the pact.

He charged that "the real purpose of this bill is to engraft upon the Kellogg-Briand treaty a new series of obligations and a new series of commitments for our nation."

Attacking the Budapest Articles of Interpretation and the Foreign Relations Committee's construction of the Kellogg Pact, Danaher denied "that if a nation violates the treaty, we are under any obligation, express or implied, to apply coercive or punitive measures."

"On Your Way to War"

He urged that Congress undertake a special study of "our commitments" before it "adopts and applies new premises of international law of which we are to be the enforcer."

Leading off the day's oratory for the Senate opposition, Senator Clark of Idaho said an overwhelming Senate vote for the measure would be tantamount to "a declaration of war."

Clark charged that Britain was fighting for "commercial supremacy, not democracy and asserted: "German naziism, Italian fascism, Russian communism and British imperialism, there is little to distinguish them."

"People of America, you are on your way to war," shouted Clark, conceding that the Senate will pass the measure.

"Sometime within the next week or so we, the Senate, will, by an overwhelming majority, make a declaration of war. Don't be alarmed; it won't be called that. We call it, I think a "lease-lend bill."

Landon Assails Lease Measure As 'War Bill'

Lawrence, Kans., Feb. 24 (INS).—Charging the lend-lease bill is the "most dangerous proposal" ever presented to Congress, Alf M. Landon tonight urged Americans to wire their Senators to defeat the measure and "save the United States from war."

Representing himself not as a leader of the Republican Party, but as "a somewhat plodding citizen," Landon in his nationally broadcast address, asked other "plain, ordinary Americans" to join with him in the protest. He continued:

"This is not simply a bill to aid Great Britain short of war. This is a war bill. It empowers the President of the United States to engage the United States in a foreign war.

"That is the reason I say to you it is a dictatorship bill. It gives to one man, the President, the authority to conduct the foreign affairs of the Nation entirely by himself, on his own, without the advice and consent of the Senate."

"Send word to your Senators tonight. Tell them the American people do not want war," he said. "Tell them the American people do not want to guarantee the boundary lines of nations everywhere and anywhere in the world."

Aikman on Physical Plant of the Unready Republic

and will "get along" increasingly better. It's what we're "all about," basically; just as a kind of sad fatalism is what long-suffering and impoverished people like the Hindus are all about.

Since there was so much of it, then, of course I tried to find out the why of all this underrunning confidence. And practically always I came out at the same place. It was faith in the United States of America's physical plant.

Very well, how is the physical plant organized?

If you could stand on some astronomically tall tower near the mouth of the Mississippi, say, and overlook all the United States at once, your first thought would be that the organization was physically as slick as an efficiency chart. The northeast quarter of the land from Chicago to the lower Ohio Valley, from Boston to Baltimore would be dark with the smoke and dust hazes of industrial activity. The southeastern quarter would be an open space of cotton and timber lands.

Directly under your eye would be the vast middle valley, spreading 2,000 miles between low green mountains on the east and the high, barren, excitingly sky-lighted mountains on the west; a valley, bright green and gold with the fields in their seasons, dusting into gray where it rises toward the arid high plains westward—the dustbowl lands. Far to the northwest, over perhaps a one-eighth section of the land, the mountains would be black again with tall evergreen timbers. Finally, over the California peaks, you would peer down into hundreds of miles of half-tropical, almost flower-colored orchard valleys.

Everything arranged by its regions, you would say rather cheerfully. The middle valley can feed us. The timber northwest and southeast can practically house us and furnish our houses. The mountains can supply us with minerals. The northeast can make us our gadgets and the digger engines which make the machinery go—the mechanism of the fuller life, if you like your scenery sweetened with rhetoric. Besides, as you looked at the immense crisscross of highways and railways running everywhere, at the streams good for power rushing down the western and eastern mountain slopes, the streams good for traffic flowing down from the Great Valley, you would be tempted to think that the man who told you the United States had serious distribution problems was indulging in malicious gossip.

But when you come down off your tower and look over the United States, region by region, locality by locality, on the ground, you fairly quickly begin realizing that much of this apparent overall physical convenience of the plant organization is illusory.

That concentration of industry which we noticed in the northeast quarter-section, for instance, no longer makes so much sense as it once did. The South is as near to coal and iron as the Northeast is; nearer to oil fuels as a power source. It is tapping its hydroelectric wealth—the cheaper and virtually indestructible future power source—faster than the Northeast is.

Industry Is Spreading

Everywhere I went in the South people kept telling me of the enormous need of their little subregions and localities for more industries. Factory pay rolls would take up the slack in the incomes of their pauperized sharecropper farm families, they said: either take $50-to-$250-a-year families off the hopeless land, or provide with a living income above what poor land gives them.

The Pacific Coast and the Western Mountain States also were asking for more industries to ease their population and pauperism problems. Think what factories, with intelligent seasonal adjustments would do, they kept telling me there, to give work and sustaining incomes to the California and Washington fruit-picking "Okies;" to Colorado's, Idaho's and Montana's beet sugar "Okies." And the Western mountains are developing hydroelectric power—with almost infinitely more to draw on—even faster than the South.

So it ought to be happy-making to report that industry is spreading out over the land mass beyond its original quarter-section fairly fast. And it is. There are huge factory smudges over St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, the Twin Cities, Birmingham; little smudges over a thousand prairie towns. Blast furnaces roar in Columbus, Ga., as well as in Pittsburgh. Textile mills, big and little, hum and click around the corner from thousands of Southern Main Streets. The biggest industrial expansion since pre-depression days is taking place in the southern California and Seattle aircraft plants.

But how much is "new industry" really benefiting these regions where it is wanted so badly? Often, as I saw it, far less than—sometimes only a small fraction of—what was expected of it. In the South, after nearly two generations of penetration, the textile mills are still trying to pay in wages to their workers as little as possible above the sharecroppers' income—to squeeze all the profits they can out of the republic's cheapest labor market. Scores of thousands of Southerners have merely left the country to live on a share-cropper level in frowzy towns. Again on the Pacific Coast, the fruit and fish cannery pay rolls furnish "pin money" to "Okies" and resident indigents rather than subsistence wages. The country's greatest concentration of aircraft manufacture in southern California has come about mainly because Los Angeles, "open shop" and inexperienced in collective bargaining, is another notorious "cheap labor" market.

Industry, in other words, as it moves out into the land mass from its old traditional quarter section. Isn't primarily interested in better mass living—or even in more prosperous customers. It is interested, above everything else, in profits. When it moves into new regions it locates itself to pursue quick profits a good deal as the old Regular Army, almost down to the present defense crisis, located its posts throughout the country to fight Indian wars.

Here is flaw No. 1 in the organization of the physical plant for the great all-American better living project. Furthermore, as I traveled around, all the other flaws that could be seen with normal eyesight and without reading too many economics books, seemed to stem from, or to be closely related to the No. 1 flaw. In example, in a country where great increases in the population every decade and the bringing of new lands into production can no longer be counted on to boom prices and enlarge markets, the first survival need of a free enterprise system would seem, rather obviously, a continual increase in the number of prosperous customers. Yet industry and business as I saw them—and agriculture as well—seemed to be busy 24 hours a day economically slaughtering customers.

Merchants and factory managers and even professional men like lawyers and physicians showed me scores, if not hundreds, of ingenious devices which enabled them to get along with less man work. It made their "venture capital," as they sometimes called it, surer of its profits.

This isn't, of course, an argument against labor-saving devices. The magnates, though, simply refuse to admit that you need to do anything about what labor-saving devices do to customers; because labor-saving devices will bring in profits next Tuesday, and sure profits next Tuesday are more important than being sure of 1945's customers. And so I found the organization of the physical plant stalled in another direction from realizing that better living objective.

Finally, I found it partially stalled in its defense program for curiously similar reasons. For after a broad overall look at the defense program, I find two things worth reporting—faulty geographical locations of defense industries and a psychological bottleneck.

Fundamentally, we are plannning for profits first and defense afterward. Thus we have our outstanding defense industries—munitions in New England, explosives from New York to Delaware, aircraft in southern California and Seattle—near our coasts most dangerously exposed to raid, attack and invasion. They are there not because the republic lacks resources to move them to relative safety inland. They are there because the workmen and the nuclear plants were there already, and profits come quicker for industry when it utilizes the facilities it already has.

The best description of the psychological bottleneck I encountered came from a Midwestern shoe manufacturer whose Government orders were beginning to be a headache. "Sure, these defense orders are a swell thing for business," he said, "but why in hell do they go in for all these time specifications? I like Uncle Sam's business all right, but I've got to take care of my customers in Manneapolis and Jackson, Miss., and Portland, Oreg., too. They'll be here when this rumpus is over."

For living or for the defense of living, then, if you can put it in a one-sentence word picture, the physical plant of the United States is organized for separate individual transactions, not for coordinative effort. Indeed, along many top sectors of the industrial and business front, I found almost religious suspicion that organization itself is immoral.

No so many years ago I asked an ex-President of the United States this question: "Isn't it unfortunate for the free enterprise system that, when it needs above everything men with analytical and organizing genius to manage it, it automatically brings to the top men who are chiefly gifted with a sense of the main chance?"

The statesman's answer was a snappish "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

I don't know any nine words which better sum up how unready the American republic of 1941 is for war, for the challenge of its mass demand for better living, for peace or for the future or for inevitable social and economic changes; how ready it is for good old-fashioned boom and panic, Mark Hanna, 1890s style—or this afternoon's cocktail hour.

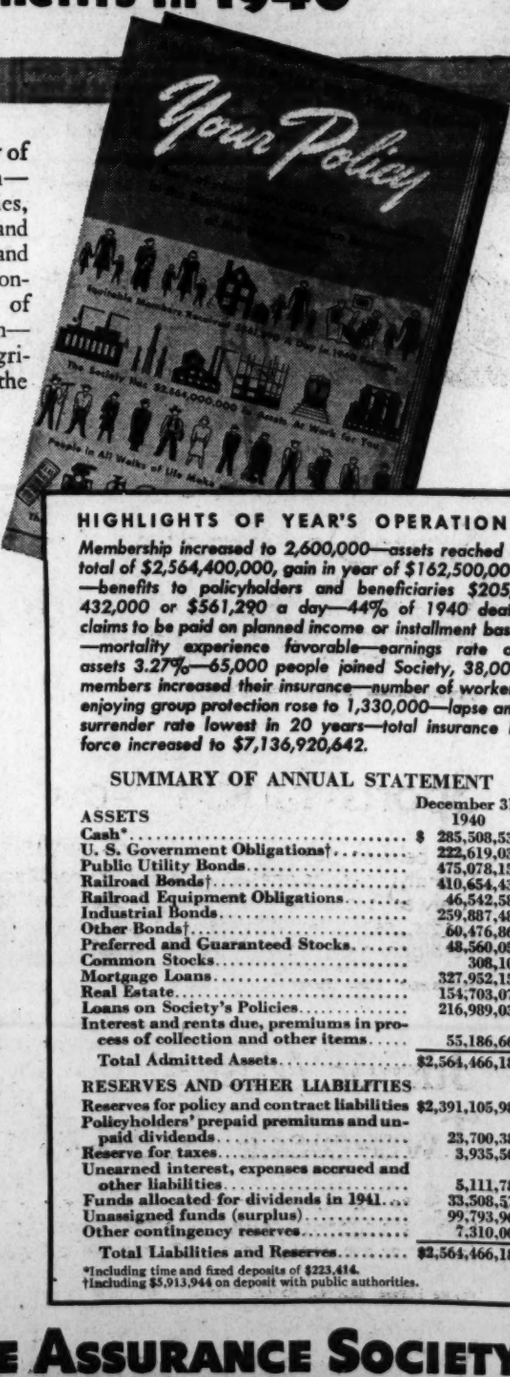
The Equitable's Report "YOUR POLICY" shows $561,290 A Day paid out in Benefits in 1940



HERE is a report that tells a human interest story of life insurance protection and service in action—a story of benefits flowing to American families, supporting widows and children, sending sons and daughters to college, clearing homes of debt and providing security for old age. Beyond these contributions to individual well-being, it is a story of importance to the economic progress of the nation—of assets constructively at work in industry, agriculture and home financing in every State of the Union.
The figures which the report presents are The Equitable's but the story it tells is the story of life insurance at work. Here you will find information that every policyholder will want to have—the answers to such questions as—
★ What happens to the dollars people pay for life insurance?
★ How can your existing life insurance be made of greater value to you?
★ What are the principal factors in life insurance costs?
★ How have insurance benefits and services been broadened to give you more for your money?
★ What is the relation of life insurance funds to national defense?
Because last year's edition of "Your Policy" was found to be of interest to many non-policyholders, including individuals, business organizations, colleges, schools and libraries, The Equitable has arranged for a limited number of copies to meet this public demand. A copy will be reserved for you upon request to any Equitable agency or the Home Office of the Society.
"Your Policy" for 1940 is being sent by mail to every individual policyholder of the Society.

U. S. Refuses To Yield Baltic Ships to Soviet

Soviet Russia was reported last night to have failed in renewed efforts to gain possession of more than a dozen Baltic merchant ships held in American ports—a major point of friction between Washington and Moscow.

Authoritative sources indicated the Government had no intention of ordering release of the vessels which have been tied up in this country since the three small Baltic states came under Russian domination last summer.

Difficulties between the United States and Russia resulting from American export restrictions also appeared to be little altered after another long conference by officials today.

Oumansky, Welles Confer

Constantine Oumansky, Soviet Ambassador, spent more than an hour with Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, in a conference which was described as a continuation of the conversations in progress for several months.

It was their first talk since the United States a month ago lifted the "moral embargo" against shipments of airplanes and aviation gasoline to Russia.

Since this "friendly gesture" Russian orders for equipment of various kinds in the United States were said to have remained "frozen" by export control restrictions.

These restrictions also have been extended to include oil drilling and refining machinery which Russia had been importing from here for development of her own petroleum industry.

Defense Hampers Policy

Authoritative sources, acknowledging Russian resentment at the increasing export restrictions, said the Government nevertheless was seeking in good faith to maintain normal trade relations with Russia, this country's best nonbelligerent foreign customer last year.

This is becoming increasingly difficult, however, it was explained, because of the growing demands of defense industries for the same supplies which Russia seeks to purchase.

American authorities, meanwhile, are seeking to determine whether there is any basis for British complaints that American supplies are "leaking" through Russia to Germany.

The issue over the Baltic ships was said to involve a question of fundamental policy under which the Government could not make an exception for Russia by releasing the Baltic ships and continuing to detain ships of other foreign registry.

29th Division Begins Period Of 'Hardening'

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort Meade, G. Meade, Md. Feb. 24.—To the last of its 10,000 officers and men, the Twenty-ninth Division swung today into the 13-week training period designed to harden it and sharpen it for combat maneuvers slated for the coming summer.

Across the flying field here, put in service for lack of other suitable ground, squads, platoons and companies marched and countermarched in close order drill. Gun crews drilled in the gun parks assigned to the areas assigned to the field artillery until their own regular parks are ready.

Noncommissioned men of all the division's regiments were assembled in full packs on one corner of the flying field for the division noncommissioned officers school designed to fit them better for command. Schools for motor mechanics, the Chemical Warfare School, the communications course, the Infantry Weapons School, the medacil officers' course, the chaplains' course and the air observers' course, all got under way.

Five Assigned to School

Under orders of division headquarters, Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding the District's 121st Engineers, assigned five officers to the Engineers School at Fort Belvoir, Va., beginning March 3 and ending March 29. They were Capts. James Quade, William I. Mushake and Samuel H. Turner and Lieuts. John R. Davis and John H. Coughlin. All other captains and all first lieutenants of the regiment, Col. Oehmann said, have completed the course.

At Fifty-fourth Artillery Brigade headquarters it was said that six officers, two each from the 110th (Maryland), 111th (Virginia) and 178th (Pennsylvania) Field Artillery would be sent to a three-month course at the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla. The officers will be named tomorrow.

Today the Engineers engaged in close order drill and minor combat problems in the area adjacent to their barracks. The 104th Ordnance Company, commanded by Capt. Melvin W. Harris, was given physical training and close order drill and received instruction in the operation of its heavy ordnance repair trucks.

Only the Twenty-ninth Military Police Company, commanded by Capt. Donald A. Falk, was not engaged in drill. With practically all of its officers and men on special duty in the cantonment and at division headquarters, a sufficient force could not be mustered for scheduled training. The company has been on duty here since January 6.

Three hundred men of the division today were in hospitals, the great majority there as a precautionary measure against development of colds into more serious afflictions.

"We not only prevent colds from developing into pneumonia," said Col. Daniel P. Card, post surgeon, "but we prevent colds from spreading. These same men at home might go to bed for a couple of days, or they might go ahead and work, but here we've got to think of the other 60 men in barracks with them."

Tomorrow the division will continue close order and gun drill and instruction in motor operation and maintenance on a gradually expanding scale.

Draft Board Janitors Can't Get Pay Without Act of Congress

The city's most obscure defense workers—janitors who have kept Washington schools open at night for draft board headquarters—probably will not be paid for their services without a special act of Congress, although funds for that purpose are available, it was learned last night.

Reason for the tie-up in night and weekend overtime pay for the school custodians is a ruling made in 1916 by the Comptroller General's Office, under which a District employe cannot be paid for work done for any other agency if his annual income would exceed $2,000.

A further hitch is that overtime payment would not be figured in the aggregate, but a $20 payment for one week is considered a $1,040 annual sum. So the yearly bookkeeping overtime sum must be added to the janitors' normal pay of $1,080 and this exceeds the $2,000 figure.

Not anticipating this wage bottleneck, the local Selective Service headquarters appropriated funds to the schools last fall to pay for custodial service in using the schools as draft board headquarters.

These funds are still figuratively rusting in the Board of Education vaults.

Told they would be paid for draft board overtime on December 10, two school janitors waited until the end of that month and decided to go on a draft strike and close the schools at the regular hour, they said yesterday. That week, those boards moved to new headquarters, so no action was taken.

Only exception to the District ruling against dual compensation is in payments made to the janitors for work for the Community Center projects. But, Chief Custodian Jerre J. Crane pointed out, the draft boards are not a Community Center project.

Gen. Albert Cox, chief of the local Selective Service boards, said last night that the boards had recently tried to pay the janitors directly, but such payments were declared illegal by the Comptroller General.

The janitors, meanwhile, are still working overtime and hoping that Congress will pass an act to make defense janitoring legal.

Aluminum, Tools Put on Priorities

of fabricators who are increasing capacity, and a "marked increase" in the manufacture of aluminum products for civilian consumers.

Less than three months ago, Stettinius said that the production of ingot aluminum was not only adequate for then estimated military and civilian requirements, but even permitted some increase in either. Fabricating facilities, he added at that time, were being increased so that while there might be temporary delays in supplying some civilian needs, "no serious difficulties are expected."

Yesterday's action, however, Stettinius admitted, was bound to cause difficulties for producers and consumers and might result in civilian users having to forego certain products or seek substitutes.

In his letters, Stettinius asked manufacturers to consider all orders for material going directly or indirectly to defense purposes which did not already have a higher rating as being designated with an "A-2" priority, which would cause them to be filled well in advance of civilian orders. In doubtful cases, Stettinius wrote, the priorities division would determine which were defense orders.

Stettinius described the action as "broad and sweeping," and necessary to speed up the defense program. A spokesman later indicated that the mandatory priority status was imposed not as an implication that the voluntary method had failed, but rather to create a "more orderly" method and to enable manufacturers to fill Army and Navy needs without incurring legal action for breaching contracts with civilian purchasers.

The situation in aluminum is expected to be eased as new production comes into the maket later this year, Stettinius indicated. Other high OPM officials, however, continue to be concerned with the seriousness of the machine tool situation.

The shortage in tools, one official said, continues to be acute, "with no horizon in sight." Major difficulty, he explained, continues to lie in the fact that to make the additional machines that turn out the machine tools, machine tools themselves must be used.

The shortage continues, he said, despite the estimate of the industry, read into the Congressional Record yesterday by Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, that it will expand production from a World War annual peak of $200,000,000 to $750,000,000 in 1941.

The report read by May and prepared by Mason Britton, head if the OPM production division machine tools section, showed that output last year was $450,000,000.

"Increasing actual output 100 per cent in 12 months is a record seldom matched by any comparable industry," Mason said. Between August, 1939, and September, 1940, 106 machine tool companies installed $20,000,000 in new equipment, the report continued.

1,300 D. C. Men Begin Training

More than 1,300 Washington selectees yesterday began their active training at Fort Meade as the Twenty-ninth Division's basic course got under way.

At the same time, the 84 men comprising the last of the District's February quota were inducted in Batlimore and sent to the Fort Meade reception center.

Meanwhile, local Selective Service headquarters announced that the last medical examination this month will be held Thursday night, with 450 registrants notified to appear at six District hospitals for the test.

A special examination was held for another 450 prospective selectees last night in the same hospitals, preliminary to the first March induction.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Theaters Get Behind Man With the Whiskers

M. P. T. O. A. Pledges Government Support; Sibyl Bowan Has a Scare at Boston Benefit; This, That and the Other About the Theater

AND SPEAKING OF DEFENSE, as everybody is, every film theater in the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, through the agency of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of the District of Columbia, the local offshoot of the national organization presided over by Ol' Massa Ed Kuykendall, has pledged complete cooperation with the Administration's defense campaign. Not only has each theater, "chain" or "independent," plaqued its facade with the Government certificate emblematic of all-out support, but, come the weekend, each will present the first of the newly sponsored and produced Government films, "The Power of Defense."

BELL

"The Power of Defense" is a single-reel subject, depicting the work being done by the Federal Establishment in its effort to preserve the integrity of the Western Hemisphere as the world's last bulwark of freedom. It will be broken out Thursday in the Loew Theaters and on Friday in the Warner Brothers houses and at RKO-Keith's. After that, or perhaps simultaneously, it will be visible on all the screens in this territory.

The boys have gone even farther than that. The M. P. T. O. A. of the District has committed itself to full support of the drive for funds for Greek relief, not only dipping into its own coffers for a direct contribution, but also agreeing to petition its patrons for voluntary contributions. And the business doesn't end there.

Conscious of local as well as national needs, the showmen have embarked upon a spread-eagle program aimed at the furtherance of the Police Boys Club's admirable aim to accumulate enough funds to snuff out potential crime at its incipient source. More power, pelf and patriotic fervor to them.

Contrary to popular report, there is no balm in Gilead. Secure in the belief that we had seen in preview every important film coming along to local screens in immediately impending weeks, we smugly contemplated the prospect of spending today doing the renegade Dick Coe's routine work without sense of personal loss. So along come the Loew functionaries with the topsy-turvy tip that "Western Union," instead of "Cheers for Miss Bishop," will follow "So Ends Our Night," at the Palace, and that they are screening it this afternoon. Well, I never was there when a telegram arrived, anyway. Maybe somebody will send me a wire report on the picture. Dollars to the hole in a cruller it will come by Postal Telegraph!

It is time to whet your wits. Along in April, according to the forecast of those who should know, "Dr. I. Q." noted radio quizmaster, will begin spouting his profitable puzzles across the footlights at Loew's Capitol Theater. The engagement is hinted to be for a period of weeks.

An incarnadined card from New York makes known that "Tony's Wife Presents Izetta Jewel, jr., at the piano with songs, at her room at 59 West Fifty-second Street." Scribbled in the margin in matching red ink appears the cryptic query, "New career?" We wouldn't know, but after her eminent success with the Cross Roads Players these past few seasons, we should say that the daughter of the former Washington stock favorite stands as little in need of a "new career" as anyone we know.

And then who should air mail in from White Plains, N. Y., but that incomparable impressionist, Sibyl Bowan. Sib., in part, had this to say: "Last Thursday I went to Boston to appear in the British War Relief Benefit at the Copley Plaza. I was to go on after Bill Robinson and felt pretty good about having a 'sock' act to follow. Just before I went on, I ran smack into Gracie Fields, who wanted to watch the show. It was too late for me to cut the 'Cockney Bathing Beauty' number, as I was undressed for it and had the music set, but I was scared to death having her right in the front row. After my act, she came back stage and I had the pleasure of meeting her formally for the first time. I told her I was afraid of doing the Cockney thing before England's best exponent of Lancashire and Cockney dialects, so she returned the compliment and said she felt the same way about doing American numbers before us. Needless to say, I have now added her to my collection of victims." By the way, Carter, how's about bringing Sib back so we can see Gracie?

Signs-of-the-Times Note

On an upper Fourteenth Street beautte shoppe windowwe: "Permanent Waves Reduced." In permanency, no doubt?

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 24.

When I talked with the dancing Hartmans on the set of "Sunny" the other day, Paul was resting, and Grace was fuming because he had gone and got himself bitten by a dog, and they had to call off their dancing routine until his hand healed.

HOPPER

The Hartmans took their satirical stuff and went a-touring last summer on the straw-hat circuit, but have never danced in their home town, San Francisco. They're afraid they'd flop—and I know the town would go mad over them. Grace told me the story of the movie agent whose phone wakened him at 3 a. m., and a voice from New York said, "How'd you like to handle me, brother? I'm making $1,500 a week here, and I'd be worth more in pictures."

"Well, what do you do?" said the agent sleepily. "Talk," said the voice. "Very interesting," said the agent, "but so does everyone else." "Yes, b you see, I'm a horse. Ain't I wonderful?"

Now that our Hollywood experts have already cast Claudette Colbert and Katharine Hepburn in Gertie Lawrence's part in "Lady in the Dark," I wonder if they realize that in addition to Gertie's superb acting, the part requires singing and dancing. Since this is a game that anybody can play, if we can't have Gertie on the screen, why not Ginger Rogers? She can do all those things.

Since Korda's changed the title of "Lady Hamilton" to "That Hamilton Woman," it's given a few old fuddy-duddies like me a terrific jolt, but maybe it's better box office. Take "Catherine of Russia," for instance. Think how they could clean up with "Cock-eyed Katie, or the Cossack Cut-up."

And speaking of titles, Paramount will do "Dildo Cay." All right, I'll stick my neck out—what or who, in pity's name, is "Dildo Cay?" How's that again? They Dild? O. K.

Did you know Jack Benny would actually like to give up that air show? Too much worry and grief. I can understand it, after his being tops for eight years, and being a worrier by nature.

Virginia Bruce, in a cinnamon brown dress with a plaid cape to match, and a flat Puritan hat, on the "Senate Page Boys" set, looked stunning. It's hard to believe she has an inferiority complex which you could cut with a sword. Then she confessed that her only ambition was to have happiness, her home, and a lot of children, and I believed her.

George Montgomery, Twentieth Century cowboy who's co-starring in "The Cowboy and the Blonde" with Mary Beth Hughes, didn't come from the wide open spaces, as the studio thought, but via Republic studio, where he used to double for the Lone Ranger. But the story he's doing is based on incidents of his own life, which he told the boys while waiting for his great opportunity. Seems as though he's got it now.

If George Murphy doesn't watch out, he'll be competing with Bob Hope in free dates. During the past month he's addressed the B'nai B'rith, Jewish Veterans of the World War and Y. M. H. A. And now Knights of Columbus want him.

John S. Knight's editorial in the Miami Herald on the speech Doug Fairbanks, jr., made down there is enlightening. Among other things he wrote that Mr. Fairbanks' technique as a speaker was better than his logic when he described the Congressional hearings on the lend-lease bill as "an old fishwives' holiday."

That imposing interloper, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," finally came to the National Theater last night. He is an enormous fellow. Enormous in his arrogance, colossal in his conceit, fabulous in his futility and Gargantuan in the glibness of his gaily compressed garrulities. The man has a stupendous capacity for benign bungling, a predilection for deviltry and a compassionate heart. This all comes out during the course of an evening in the theater that is as prolific in sound sentiment as it is in the seductions of delirious dialogue.

In "The Man Who Came to Dinner," the Messrs. Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, authors, have pulled none of their verbal punches. They have written with a freedom and a frankness that would be a little shocking were their ribaldries not aimed so surely and so unerringly at the sapience of sophisticated audiences. The actual identities of the principal figures in their play are too much admired and beloved to be mistaken or misconstrued. They have a frivolous and a fiery time with easily identifiable personalities that have provided much of the recent theater's most provocative pastiming. All of them they treat kindly, if kaleidoscopically and at times a bit revealingly.

Foremost among these engaging subjects of their vivisections, of course, is the outrageous egomaniac who came to dinner. He came to dinner in a small Ohio city, dislocated a hip on a sprig of ice and remained in the Stanley home for weeks on end. Those weeks were enough for him to derange the placid life of a prosperous Midwestern family almost beyond repair. His own life was not immune to the disruptions his enforced confinement to a wheelchair caused. He almost lost a priceless secretary, the admiration of an adoring feminine stage star and the respect of a couple of youngsters, who took his word for it to their own sorrow.

Impeccable Comedy Writing

There is no need to go into this thing much farther. "The Man Who Came to Dinner" is one of those rare examples of intimate and impeccable comedy writing that come along only once in the drama's blue moon and deserves the two weeks it has been allotted on the National's booking sheets.

Since the title role of the piece was designed from the spacious life of Alexander Woollcott, a man of infinite zest and jests, it is one of the Capital's more particular blessings that he himself should appear here in the role which he inspired. Mr. Woollcott may not be so brilliant as an actor as he is in some of the other ramifications of his abundant talents, but if he cannot play himself upon the stage, who could do it better? There are times during the progress of this flamboyant frolic when Mr. Woollcott may be deemed a bit on the elocutionary side, but there are a great many more times when he seems to be exclusively and explosively himself. His dressing of the part is something to see. If anyone ever arrayed himself in a more pyrotechnic succession of lounging robes than this unwelcome guest—speaking only for the Stanleys, that is—we should like to be blinded by his sartorial extravagances.

There are moments when we might wish that the Town Crier would cry a little more violently in the interest of the pungent lines his pals, Mr. Kaufman and Mr. Hart, have written for him, but, in the large view, Mr. Woollcott is a tremendously acceptable Mr. Woollcott.

Superlative Supporting Cast

His supporting cast has more than a little to do with the round success of the comedy, too. Time is getting short—as it has a pernicious habit of doing when the dreaded deadline draws near, but there ought to be enough of both time and space left to say that Lea Penman, as Mrs. Stanley, unwitting hostess of the incorrigible guest; Edith Atwater, as his patient and long-suffering secretary—the original in the role, by the way—Minnie Dupree, and Erik Rhodes, as the presumable counterpart of Noel Coward, render rather more than yeomen's service in establishing "The Man Who Came to Dinner" as one of the most hilarious of the season's hits on E Street.

And not to mention James Truex, Gretchen Davidson, Sydney Grant, Mrs. Priestley Morrison, Clyde Fillmore, Arthur Griffin, Walter Coy and Teddy Hart in the same breath would be something akin to the usual lapses to which we always lay ourself liable at such periods of editorial stress.

But it is to Doris Dolan that we wish to pay a special ribute. Her portrayal of the role of Lorraine Sheldon, a personality you may or may not recognize, is one of the gems of the evening.

We'd like, sometime, to write a play in which she might be interested.

$34,000 Oriental Rug Is Movie Prop

Most valuable "prop" in use currently in Hollywood studios is a $34,000 oriental rug, used in the living room scene in "The Man Who Lost Himself," which stars Brian Aherne and Kay Francis.

The rug measures 18x36 feet and is insured against fire, theft and acts of providence.

That Despotic Diner-Outer

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT

in the title role of the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart comedy, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," which last night opened its fortnight's engagement in the National Theater. The play is impishly based upon the public and private life of its distinguished star

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 24.

GABRIEL PASCAL, producer and director of George Bernard Shaw's pictures, told the story of Shaw's reaction to his "Pygmalion" getting the Academy Award as the best movie of the year . . . When Shaw heard the news he refused to accept the prize. Then he learned that the prize was accompanied by an "Oscar"—a gold statuette . . . "Gold? Well, that's different," he said—and cabled to Hollywood: "All right. Send it over" . . . The statuette was duly forwarded to his home, and Shaw studied it. He discovered that it wasn't made of gold. He therefore sent it to Pascal, with a note saying, "This Academy Award really belongs to you" . . . Pascal returned it, explaining: "I don't want any junk either." And so now the forlorn, much traveled statuette is in George Bernard Shaw's study at Whitehall.

LYONS

OFFICERS ABOARD the Normandie have confided that they expect sailing orders within the next two weeks . . . Clare Boothe flew to Savannah to get local color for a musical comedy she's writing—set in the early American period. Rodgers & Hart will write the music, Gilbert Miller will produce it and Mitzi Green and Clifton Webb will appear in it . . . William Mc. Martin, president of the New York Stock Exchange, passed his physical exams Friday, for induction into the Army . . . Private John Astor Drayton of the Astor clan took his captain to El Morocco last night to give his commanding officer a vivid picture of the life he was sacrificing to serve his country.

LEE TRACY, the veteran star, sat with Worthington Minor, the director, at Sardi's. "Of all the plays I've been in," said Tracy, "guess which one I hated the most" . . . Minor tried guessing, but then said: "I give up. Which of the plays you've been in did you hate the most?" . . . "'Front Page'," confessed Tracy. "The Hecht-MacArthur play, 'Front Page'" . . . "But that play made you," Minor reminded. "What didn't you like about it?" . . . "One thing," replied the hardened Tracy. "The dirty words."

THE MARCH OF TIME is preparing a film about the Greek War Relief office, at 730 Fifth Avenue. Prof. Harold Lagovdakis, of the University of Athens, is one of the officials at the war relief office. He was instructed to have a larger number of men present to show the universal sympathy being extended for Greece and expressed by a willingness to work for that country's cause . . . The professor went through the building, collecting volunteers to appear in the movie. He was disturbed by the cold reception he received in an office on the twelfth floor—until he was told that it was the office of the Italian Language Radio Station WOV.

THIS STORY is for pipe-smokers. It concerns an Englishman who had a rare pipe which he smoked for 20 years. "You Americans shouldn't smoke good pipes," he told his friend. "You inhale hurriedly and puff excitedly. That spoils a pipe. A good pipe should be mellowed by steady, even smoking. That's why a pipe fits the calm, imperturbable temperament of the people of England" . . . A few months later he met his American friend again and said: "Remember that rare pipe of mine, which you admired? Well, here it is. I present it to you" . . . "But why?" asked the American. "You've had it so long, and I know you're fond of it?" . . . "This is what happened," the Britisher informed, calmly and imperturbably. "I came home one day, smoked my pipe and walked into the garden. There I suddenly saw my wife in the arms of the gardener . . . Well, I drew a startled breath and ruined my pipe. Take it. You'll never know the difference."

WHEN POLAND'S new Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski, arrived at Union Station in Washington he was delighted to see several companies of National Guardsmen, with their band, lined up in review formation. He wasn't told that the men were of the Twentieth Coast Artillery, en route to Georgia—being reviewed by Assistant Secretary of War Robert Patterson . . . Jerry Lester, who stages the two-hour shows at Army and Navy camps each week, now calls himself "Elsie Janis 2nd"

PETER T. FISHER, a book-seller, came to America two years ago and established an office in New York. He imported books from Europe—a business which has been hampered by the war. A few days ago he succeeded in obtaining, from London, some copies of Thomas Mann's original edition of "Disorder and Early Sorrow," which had been published in Berlin. One of the copies had been damaged by a Nazi bomb. Fisher sent this copy to Mann—who presented it to the Thomas Mann collection at Yale University. "Perhaps when the war is over," wrote Mann, "some Germans once more may want to see it."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 24.—Marlene Dietrich, the epitome of glamour, who has never made a comedy, is to star in "Miss Madden Is Willing," a sophisticated bit of nonsense by James Edward Grant. She'll make the picture for Columbia with Mitchell Leisen, of "Arise My Love," directing. This is only a small part of this story, for Marlene and Mitch are a package deal sold to Columbia by Charles Feldman, agent.

PARSONS

The story will star Marlene as soon as she finishes "Handle with Care," at Warners and her Universal commitment, and Mitch completes "Hold Back the Dawn," for Para.

Had a chat with Buddy De Sylva, Paramount's new production chief, and much as he would like to get his own "Louisiana Purchase" for Bob Hope and Victor Moore, he won't lift a finger. He says even though he did write the story it should be in the open market. I judged Buddy felt Para had the inside track, although Twentieth Century-Fox is a strong contender.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Virginia Gilmore and Fritz Lang couldn't be more serious; the Milton H. Felds (Universal official) have adopted a day-old baby; Bill Fields, now an orange juice expert, according to the newspapers, will have two other Vitamin B drinkers in his next movie—Gloria Jean and Baby Sandy; Bill Leeds and Ben Finney, both well known in Hollywood, are stranded in Singapore. Their wives in Hollywood are terribly worried; Al Hall certainly knows beauty when he sees it; first Lucille Ball and now Evelyn Ankers, who is gorgeous.

There was a near accident when a car came skidding down the hill and crashed into the front door of Helen Ferguson's office and nearly hit Louis Hayward, who was coming out the door; Marian Cooper, who went to England for Walter Wanger on "Eagle Squadron," is in Lisbon, according to a cable received; one of the nicest preview parties of all time was the one Universal arranged for Deanna Durbin's "Nice Girl." Of course, Deanna was there looking as pretty as a picture in a gay flowered hat; Robert Seiter, director, Robert Stack, and Joe Pasternak, producer, whose pride and joy is and always will be Deanna, greeted the guests.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Stalin Foe's Killing Stirs Hunt of Plot

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 24.—Detectives investigating the murder of Col. Michael Borislavsky, White Russian exile and military inventor, who was found shot to death in the rear of a convent in upper Manhattan, today considered the possibilities that international intrigue may have played a hand.

Borislavsky's death followed that of Gen. Walter G. Krivitsky in a Washington hotel room February 10. Both men were enemies of Stalin and the Soviet regime.

Col. Borislavsky's most recent invention, an aerial torpedo, had already been submitted to the United States War Department.

The inventor's body was found sprawled on a sidewalk behind the convent. Police found the bullet which pierced Borislavsky's spectacles and head and rushed it to the laboratory for examination.

Although they disclaimed knowledge of the case, it was reported that the FBI is working with detectives.

Borislavsky was a member of a White Russian organization, the Russian officers military alliance, whose leaders, two of whom were slain in Paris, were targets for the Soviet Secret Police. He was 55, 6 feet tall, weighed 250 pounds and was a graduate of the Russian Military Academy. He had been a naturalized citizen of this country for 20 years.

Col. Feodor Maybohn, the slain scientist's partner, said the aerial torpedo had been accepted by the government and that he and Borislavsky also had perfected a "smoke clearing bomb" that would revolutionize aerial photography.

Maybohn said he had returned from Washington Sunday night after being told the Government had accepted the aerial bomb and was prepared to pay between $500,000 and $600,000 for it. He was waiting at Borislavsky's $35 a month apartment when police arrived with news of the murder.

In Washington today the War Department disclaimed any knowledge of Borislavsky's invention However, the National Inventors' Council reported he had submitted a design for an "aerial torpedo" on December 1, 1940, which the council had subsequently found "not necessary to national defense."

Police surmised that Borislavsky had fought before being shot to death. His heavy walking stick was found clutched tightly in his right hand.

The first impression was that he had been robbed, but his fur-lined overcoat was tightly buttoned. He had 11 cents and a valuable watch in his pockets.

The former officer in the Czar's army left home yesterday shortly after 5 p. m. His body was found lying face downward in a pool of blood three hours later.

His wife, prostrated by shock, said he had received anonymous threats of death three years ago.

"He received an anonymous warning in the mail," she said. "He believed it was because he had fought the Bolsheviks."

Nicholas P. Rybakoff, editor of Rossiya, a Russian language newspaper published in New York, disclosed that his paper had printed several articles by Borislavsky which were strongly critical of the Stalin regime.

"Although Col. Borislavsky was more of a scientist than an active politician, he was well known for his hatred of communism," he said.

It was revealed that the slain scientist's 32-year-old daughter by an earlier marriage is living in Germany, the wife of a Nazi soldier. Borislavsky also seemed to have been intensely interested in Nazi aviation. His home has many pasted-up clippings of parachute troop activities and Nazi air developments.

Browder to Quit As Party Officer

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Earl Browder announced tonight he was resigning as general secretary of the Communist Party in the United States and would be succeeded by Robert Minor, veteran Communist leader.

Browder shortly will begin serving a four-year sentence for using a passport obtained by fraud.

Minor, once one of the country's highest-pai dnewspaper cartoonists, was one of a group which broke away from the old Socialist Party in 1919 to found the Communist Party.

Browder made his announcement at one of four "Free Earl Browder" meetings held tonight.

Two of the assembly plants would produce big four-engined bombers with a cruising range in excess of 4,000 miles, while the other two would build powerful two-engined craft for shorter-range work. The four plants would have an annual output of 3,600 planes.

The $3,812,311,197 supplemental estimate was divided, $1,716,225,000 in cash and $2,096,086,197 in authorizations. The list of items included $668,395,000 to build new munitions plants of various types and provide other means of expediting arms production.

A lump sum of $104,425,000 was included for military construction at places "to be approved by the President." This includes, it was said, housing, fortifications and air bases.

Army to Double Its "Navy"

No details were given as to any part of the program, including the $888,236,000 cash and $524,025,000 contractual authority asked for the Air Corps. Army officials said, however, that the 3,600 bomber program was included.

Meanwhile the War Department announced that the Quartermaster Corps will purchase this year more than 400 mine-planters, passenger and freight vessels, rescue ships and other boats of various types. This will more than double the Army's "navy," which now numbers 330 ships.

Meanwhile Chairman Walsh announced a meeting of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee this morning to consider a House-approved bill authorizing naval bases at Guam, Samoa and other American outposts in the Pacific and Atlantic.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Unimpressed Londoners Laugh When Gas Attack Is 'Rehearsed'

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer.

London, Feb. 24.—Officials tried today to show London how a gas attack works but Londoners didn't pay much attention, except for a laugh or two.

Gas was sprayed in a bombed street area while 200 citizens looked on.

"Gas," yelled a warden, and gas masks popped out everywhere.

A stray dog, unmindful of the importance of the occasion, appeared on the scene. The procedure was halted while wardens dashed about crying:

"Who owns the dog?"

The owner was not found and a bobby chased the dog away as spectators laughed.

A loudspeaker explained what was happening.

"High explosives hit first," the speaker said, "then this gas is dropped. Many injured are in the buildings, some trapped."

Two helmeted and gas-masked figures in oilskins with strange curtains around their necks—rushed from the house carrying three girls and two tailors' dummies.

A stretcher gang arrived. So did the stray dog again. A bobby in gas clothes made after the dog.

"A food shop also has been contaminated," came the shout over the loudspeaker.

Here a yellow-helmeted gang arrived and quickly inspected the food, trying to salvage some of it.

"Stand back please," warned a warden, "this gas may be unpleasant as the wind has shifted."

The spectators paid no attention. Some moved up. An old lady came by and tried to get through the gassed area.

"Halt, madam," warned a warden, "here's a gas attack going on."

"I don't care, I'm late to work," she cried.

Several Get Headaches

Whipping on a gas mask, she pushed through, neatly stepping over the spots in the street where the gas had been dropped.

The gas was diluted but several got a whiff, burned their eyes and suffered mild headaches, although they were 75 yards away.

Gassed victims were quickly removed to a washing station. The food was taken somewhere else. "Bombed" victims were taken to still another station. The gassed spots were covered with some special mixture.

The crowd, which by now included three children in tiny masks, moved away, most of them laughing and joking.

A bobby reutrned leading a dog on a rope. The bobby, looking pleased, said the dog was sad but apparently ungassed.

Taxable Residents

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech has directed new attention to the fact that passage of the Commissioners' amendments to the District tax laws would not force Virginia and Maryland residents earning their income in Washington to pay an income tax here. All income tax paid to any State would be credited against any obligation to the District. But the two adjacent States have higher income taxes than the District, so that there would be nothing due to the local tax collector. Mr. Keech's explanation also shows that the words "double taxation," sometimes heard in reference to this proposal, are inapplicable. The only double duty would be in filing returns, and the sum of a taxpayer's obligations would be equal to the higher tax, whether in the District or in the State. If these circumstances could be thoroughly understood, they should quiet the fears of legislators who have fought the District's tax program for years and may be preparing to open fire again.

This doesn't mean, of course, that the amendment will not yield revenue. It should be of aid in getting something out of a number of persons who have resided in the District for years but who contend they are "domiciled" elsewhere. The District's troubles with this class of residents began when the United States Court of Appeals ruled that a man who had lived here twenty years was not subject to the intangible property tax because his legal residence was in Massachusetts. Later the District's one-man Board of Tax Appeals made a similar and consequent decision in an income tax case. The District may overcome this handicapping precedent by another proposed amendment, which would impose an income tax on all who reside here for six months of the taxable year. But what the courts will do to such legislation is always problematical, so perhaps it is just as well to have both shots in the locker.

Idle Ships

"Ships and more ships!" continues to be our cry, no less than the cry of the British. And yet a fleet of 36 Danish vessels remains idle in American ports. The situation is the more galling in view of the fact that the boats seem to be tied up by technicalities more than by anything else.

No doubt the United States would be pleased to see these ships put into service in British sea lanes, if that were practicable. Negotiations between the British and the Danes, however, seem to be at a stalemate. The owners can't sell their ships without consent from Copenhagen, and with that capital under the Nazi heel, no possibility of obtaining such consent can be seen. Of course, the ships could operate under their own flag if they had assurance of being unmolested, but the British are understandably reluctant to give such assurance. Naturally they would rather see the vessels remain idle in port than to take a chance on their being called home, under German pressure, once they were on the high seas.

At present, therefore, the most feasible plan appears to be the chartering of these vessels by American shipping companies. In the first months of the war American companies didn't know what to do with their own idle ships which were diverted from the North Atlantic service under the Neutrality Act. Now all these vessels are being used elsewhere. Not only has the demand for bottoms greatly increased as a result of our defense program and the construction of new bases; at the same time tonnage on hand to carry these cargoes has diminished. Many ships belonging to Great Britain and her allies have gone to the bottom, with the effect of throwing a greater burden upon American lines formerly in competition with vessels flying the Union Jack.

Under plans now being discussed the 36 idle ships would continue to fly the Danish flag and be operated by Danish seamen. But they would ply between this country, South America and the Far East under charter to American companies. This arrangement could be effected without permission from the Danish government. But since efforts still might be made to order the ships home to Denmark, it appears that difficulties are being encountered as to their insurance. If this obstacle cannot be overcome, Congress may have to intervene to end the anomaly of idle crews and ships in a period when more bottoms are urgently needed.

Eyes On Singapore

Perhaps the most striking poll taken by the Gallup organization to date appeared in this newspaper Sunday. It dealt with American opinion on the threat which Japan is hanging over Oceania in case the world does not oblige Mr. Matsuoka and "cede" this vast and rich subcontinent. The question was: Do you think the United States should try to keep Japan from seizing the Dutch East Indies and Singapore? Only 24 per cent answered no, while as many as 56 per cent responded with a decisive yes.

The vote becomes a portent as well as a sign when read against the background of previous polls. In early 1940, for instance, a "Fortune" survey found that little more than half of the Americans polled favored the defense of our own Territory of Hawaii. The change shows a public opinion in a state of momentum on the side of intervention. The reason, perhaps, is not due primarily to any more information about the lands in the Pacific. Americans have little opportunity to study world affairs with the resources available to the Far Eastern experts. The change in all likelihood comes more from a new feeling in their bones; in other words, it is less intellectual than instinctive. For it is coming over our citizenry, with the common sense which Theodore Roosevelt said must be the great reliance of American statesmanship, that a squeeze play at its expense is in progress between Berlin and Tokyo. And in the presence of any challenge or any intimidation of this sort the American blood has never been lethargic. So the 56 per cent who replied yes to the question whether we should try to keep Japan from seizing the Dutch East Indies and Singapore are actionists.

In point of fact, Singapore is one of the few keys to the world power for which Japo-Hitlerism is bidding. Perhaps at this particular juncture in the march of events Singapore is the main key. Think, at any rate, of what would flow from the fall of this great "gateway to the East." It would put up a barrier in front of the Australasian war effort in Europe. It would enable the Japanese to blockade Rangoon, the port whence Free China obtains supplies for transport along the Burma Road. It would put the Japanese in a position to push out controls along the south Pacific belt to the Philippines and beyond. It would make Japan master of the oceanic trade routes along which we get a long line of raw materials and tropical products. It would make the Japanese independent of any economic coercion with which we might seek to restrain them on the Asian continent. These are all concrete results that would flow from a successful assault on Singapore. But there are equal significant intangibles to be considered in the Singapore equation. Since this famous port is a key to world power, the fence-sitters in the world might be tempted to come down on the side of the Axis powers. Moscow in all likelihood might conclude that the Axis powers, after all, were going to win, and Moscow's decision, coming on top of the Singapore change itself, would be influential in Turkey.

All these certainties and possibilities are, of course, well known to our policy makers in Washington. But these have long hesitated to pit their countermoves appropriately against this great design to grab the keys of world power. Every grab, to be sure, has been noted with serious concern, we have refused to recognize conquests; but we have done little else to check the aggressor in the Far East. Secretary Stimson would have headed off the design when the design showed up no bigger than a man's hand on the horizon. It is time to go back to his pace-setting. And now that there is no longer any hesitation about the Far East on the part of the British Commonwealth, now that public opinion in this country is aroused to the significance of Singapore, the Administration has ample warrant for the plainest of plain warnings that the Japanese will arouse more than our concern in any move they make to filch the key of Asia and Oceania.

Kiss Of Death

Neither the British nor we can for a moment afford to minimize the destructive power of the German submarine campaign. U-boats have done great damage to British shipping in the year and a half since the war began. They may, as Hitler threatened in his speech yesterday, do even greater damage this spring. But Hitler could hardly have made that threat in the hope of intimidating his enemy. His boast of German strength gives evidence of being designed to help the morale of his people, and particularly of the Italian people. The latter was forced to listen to a pep-talk by their shopworn Duce on Sunday in which he assured them that Germany's strength would ultimately lead to a victory for the Axis. Hitler has now underlined his remarks with a few meaningless verbal bouquets in the direction of a partner whom he must despise. Italy, he said, is Germany's only real friend; a statement which ought to alarm the Germans as it undoubtedly will alarm the Italians, though for another reason. The "strongest cooperation" exists between the two nations, he went on to say, and they form a combination which should not be ridiculed by the enemy. In discussing the nature of their cooperation, however, he was careful to mention only naval matters, and to say nothing about cooperation in the military sphere. To thinking Italians the Fuehrer's embrace will seem perilously like a kiss of death.

"During the day of December 8 from various symptoms—increased reconnaissances over our real lines and the repeated sighting of strong enemy mechanized troops between Biremba and Birmella—I felt that an enemy attack was imminent and repeated my warning to the command, ordering them to be ready to oppose an attack if it were launched . . .

D. C. Jobs

Chief Clerk Walker F. Bramhall's idea of character investigations for all new Police Court employes seems a sensible one. Indeed, it may come as something of a shock to the man in the street when he is made to realize that the minor employes of this important public agency may be hired with less consideration than that used by a careful business house. But the fact is that an appointment can be made on the recommendation of a citizen or the request of a member of Congress who has no personal interest in the District, and without any official investigation.

The present system of appointments, some by the board of judges and some by individual jurists, puts an inappropriate burden on the bench. The bill about to be offered for consolidation of the Police and Municipal Courts is expected to carry some provision for a different practice, possibly putting the responsibility on the presiding judge or the clerk of the court. But in any event it will be hard for the appointing official to judge the character or relative qualifications of all persons recommended unless he has help. Some prescribed method of investigation would relieve him of the duty to make personal inquiries and also of pressure from interested parties. Moreover, it would greatly increase the dignity of the court and the public's confidence in the court's dedication to efficient local justice.

THE PIPER

The morning came, a piper,
And whistled me from bed.
I rose to brew my pot of tea,
And break my loaf of bread,
But the gay, the bright insistence
Of that whistle sounding clear
And high outside my open door
Was all that I could hear.

I set my kettle back before
It had begun to sing.
I left my loaf unbroken quite,
And walked a path in spring:
A little feathered dewy path,
And high, a hidden bird
Reiterated often one
Clear shining silver word:
"Sweetheart, Sweetheart . . ." my loaf forgot,
My tea untouched by flame—
I walked the wood as one who hears
A long unuttered word.

For Repeal Of Draft

The idea of dying for others has long been superseded by the more courageous one of living for usefulness, thus fairly facing the responsibilities which love and life may bring. I wonder if we are being entirely honest with ourselves and the youths we are planning to use for our defense. Is it for our sense of worthiness or for theirs that we tell them "some things" are worth dying for? Whom do we deceive?

Perhaps it is because of the hateful purposes of war that confusion faces people of good will. The causes of war are too well understood today by too many people for all of us to be blinded by its glory. The emphasis should be laid entirely on finding and explaining these causes, rather than on looking for the worthiness of methods which obviously have never really solved any international problems, since warfare is ever and ever conducted on an increasingly larger scale.

Let us face ourselves. However great the purposes of any war, those who have established them are not those who die for them. Where then is the nobility? Does it lie in the sending of young men to die for the makers of wars? Can we then purchase for ourselves a noble death by putting others on the battleline in our name? I think not.

However much I have approved of President Roosevelt and his efforts to extend democracy, I must disagree with him regarding the present regime of conscription for military training as a program worthy of American democracy.

Let us repeal the conscription laws, and give the boys a chance to make a better world come to pass. The present militaristic world is of our own making. Surely we are not going to feel worthy in letting them do the dying.

Warms To Willkie

I agree with Mr. Ernest Lindley that Wendell Willkie stands forth as a bigger man now than when he was the Republican nominee for President.

I had the pleasure of hearing him the other day and believe him to be a very honest, sincere and loyal American citizen.

A Toast

In these trying days, when from the immemorial east to the farthest reaches of the setting sun, man is taking advantage of man, it may be well for some of us to read the toast of Lieut. Gov. Rodes K. Myers of Kentucky to the assembled colonels of the Governor's staff at the meeting of the Kentucky Society the other evening here. It was as follows:

I give you a man dedicated to the good things of life, to the gentle, the heartfelt things, to good living and to the kindly rites with which it is surrounded.

In all the clash of a plangent world he holds firm to his ideal—a gracious existence in that country of content "where slower clocks strike happier hours."

He stands in spirit on a tall-columned veranda; a hospitable glass in his hand, and he looks over the good and fertile earth, over ripening fields, over the meadows of rippling blue grass.

The rounded note of a horn floats through the fragrant stillness. Afar, the sleek and shining flanks of a thoroughbred catch the bright sun.

The broad door, open wide with welcome . . . the slow, soft-spoken word . . . the familiar step of friendship . . . all this is his life, and it is good.

He brings fair judgment to sterner things. He is proud in the traditions of his country, in ways that are settled and true.

In a trying world darkened by hate and misunderstanding he is a symbol of those virtues in which men find gallant faith and of the good men might distill from life.

Here he stands, then. In the finest sense an epicure . . . a patriot . . . a man. Ladies and gentlemen, I give you the Kentucky colonel. OBSERVER.

For Cleaner Streets

The recent story of the damage to thin hosiery by the high wind brings dramatically to our attention a condition which has long needed remedying. The dirty streets of the National's Capital menace not only hosiery but health as well. Why can't we have clean streets?

California's Red Tape

The letter from "A California Resident" on our automobile inspection was amusing. However, the temerity of a resident of a place whose road accidents probably exceed those of any other place on earth and where the red tape of licenses, permits, and inspections is probably the longest of any of our States, is refreshingly amazing. A Californian should talk about inspections!

With the rear compartment of our sedan loaded down with all our bags we crossed the Colorado from Yuma. Entering Arizona had been bad enough: there they had looked superficially for bugs and beetles. But at Winterhaven, Calif., where we were stopped at the near end of a very long building, we were subjected to a searching inspection worse than the customs. The chief inspector told me to unload and unlock everything, and since we were momentarily their only victims, all the other inspectors immediately surrounded us and began pawing through our things. How they expected to find trees growing in my socks, or seeds planted in my shirts, or plants being nurtured in my business suits I never knew, but the chief inspector told me those were the things for which they were looking.

Deciding to make the best of the inevitable, I repacked each bag, and reloaded all of them to make the load more balanced through the long California desert treck ahead. And having once lived in California for five years, I decided to place our valuables and papers in a bag at the bottom in order to make it a little more difficult for bandits. I finally completed the job and was then ordered by the chief inspector to report to the officer at the far end of the long inspection platform.

In that office a languid clerk asked for my car owner's certificate of title. I showed him my operator's permits, including my old California driver's license, my State tax receipts, my car owner's card, a small replica of portions of the title certificate over my signature, my membership cards, my passport, and my watch: all in vain. Before he would grant me a "transit visa" for my few days' trip through California he had to see the title from my State, and this I had just finished carefully safeguarding at the bottom of the load under heaps of bags and baggage. The chief inspector who had watched my work had carefully refrained from telling me what was next. Can any other place exceed California's auto-inspection red tape? EDWIN OWSLEY.

Prevention Of Disease

The eyes of the country are on the legal fight going on in Washington between Group Health and the A. M. A. because, in a sense, it will involve a new order in the medical world. This awakens thinkers among the laity to the fact that neither side is right as far as we, the "victims," are concerned. If doctors know anything about how to cure disease, they must know something about how to prevent it. That is what we want to know—unless, perchance, it is guesswork. We care little whether or not the system is "pre-pay." What we want is pre-knowledge. And we are willing to pay for it. We would rather pay for it in money than in ill health. But this would truly be a "new order," for doctors do not function as "teachers of health" but as "treaters of disease."

The issue of true prevention—the only sane approach to health—is up to the laity, regardless of the Public Health Service we maintain with our taxes. It is up to us to get busy and demand this "new order" of knowledge and prevention rather than "cure."

The Art vs. Nature Controversy

Mr. E. K. Shilling in his letter to The Post of February 21 takes up the much used cudgel against the so-called "modern" forms in art and music. Does not Mr. Shilling realize that every great painter and composer was "modern" in his day? If Mr. Shilling is a student of music, as he says, surely he knows that Wagner was entirely unacceptable to his contemporaries and was laughed out of the concert hall. Perhaps Mr. Shilling's prejudices are so fixed that he still can't enjoy the cacophony of Wagner, and if that is so, I respectfully submit that he may as well give up his study of music.

The subjective enjoyment of music is of major importance and the extent of one's appreciation is a function of the psychology of the individual listener. The objective examination of technique and method is a different matter and a student of music must approach his art in this manner. Mr. Shilling does so, and discusses music in terms of overtones, major triads, and seconds and sixths. He implies that since seconds and sixths do not fall in the natural scale of overtones that they have no place in harmonic composition.

Mr. Shilling states that anything which is grotesque and unnatural is perforce unbeautiful. It is only sufficient to say that the modern composers with their use of cacaphony or atonality approach infinitely nearer the actual sound of nature. As a matter of fact, and strangely enough, the modern painter and the conservative composer are brothers in that they both appeal solely to the senses and not to the reason. Mr. Shilling would have the painter adhere to the meticulous copying of form and color in nature and yet he deplores any approach to such technique on the part of the composer. Since he wants music to be "natural," perhaps he will tell us where, in nature, we shall find the perfect major triad, or even his hated seconds and sixths, for that matter.

Carnival Time

This, the last week in February, is a week of laughter and dancing, color and pageantry, all the way from New Orleans down to the southern tip of Chile. From now until Ash Wednesday there is a gay and festive spirit abroad; floats are being decorated, beauty queens are being chosen, country people go to the city to join in the fun. The carnival spirit laughs at class divisions, thumbs its nose at prestige and formality. People dance in the streets. It is the time for a whirl and a rose in the hair, before touching the forehead with ash.

In New Orleans the whites will have their queen of beauty, and the colored will have theirs. The white people will have one ball, and the colored people will have three balls. It should be gay down there this year.

Down in Panama the girls will dress in their colorful polleras. The senoritas of the beauty festival parade through the streets singing native songs. They ride in decorated floats, while mummers amuse the crowds and people jam the streets to watch the queen of beauty.

In South America they have had carnivals since remote times. In Lima, Peru, the town has had a carnival every year for over 150 years. Those early celebrations of joy were rough affairs. They thought it great sport to throw broken glass from their safe overhanging balconies down on people passing below. When the supply of glass ran low, they threw pails of water. The streets were narrow and the balconies numerous, so it was fun, for those up high. Now they only elect a queen of beauty, as we do. It sounds tame, after considering historical precedents, but it has one great advantage—no one is in need of hospital attention after it is over.

Up in Bolivia, carnival has a special place in the hearts and minds of the people when February comes around on the calendar. I once spent carnival week 11,000 feet up in the air, on the Bolivian plateau. It was summer within the tropics, and the sun shone every day with a clear brilliance, but it was cold in the shade, even in the middle of the day, and even worse after the sun went down. Apple and willow trees were the only trees that would grow in the town of Oruro. So all the color and bustle that a carnival can give is most welcome.

Weeks in advance the Aymaras begin to trickle into town to buy new clothes. Women wear new skirts, 10 yards around and tailor made. These skirts are put on top of the old ones, so all the women appear to be the same size. That must have its advantages. They drink chicha with their friends, watch the processions, and gossip a little.

The most important procession during carnival in any town in Bolivia is the silver procession. In Oruro, about 60 mules walked through the streets laden with hand-wrought silver articles of great interest and beauty. There were spoons of all sizes, plates, cups with graceful handles, silver birds with silver feathers, bombillas, through which they drink a tea called "mate," silver dishes shaped like men, with three legs to stand on. I stood in a balcony looking down on the procession. We foreigners, English and American, wished we could beg, buy or steal some of these lovely things, but the Indians refuse to sell any of it unless in dire need.

Women in white Panama hats, red, green, cerise or purple shawls, with skirts of assorted colors, walked beside the procession carrying their babies on their backs. The babies were dressed in blue, yellow, red—any color you can think of—and their big black eyes looked out in wonder at the world of many colors. Even though this is a desert town, no one could say it was drab. Over all was the beautiful blue sky, almost cloudless, and the great chain of the Andes beyond.

Following the mules came the devil dancers. On their faces were fierce masks and horns on their heads. Their costumes glittered with beaded aprons swaying as they danced. They carried wands in the shape of snakes which they flourished above their heads and waved as they jumped about. The small boys of the town followed them all day long.

This procession moved up the hill to the Church of the Virgin of Saccoban. There the silver was left over night to be blessed. So it passed by and left me, a foreigner, standing on a balcony.

"Have a cup of tea," offered my English friends. "Come on down to the club for a game of tennis this afternoon." But I couldn't remove the spell of the sun on the silver, or the sound of soft voices, or the winding band of color on the hillside. I wandered off alone in hopes of meeting a devil dancer face to face. I walked up to the tower that has a light at the top, a beacon for the Indian out in the vast trackless desert at night. It was a day to remember.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Vindicated By The Result

IT HAS BEEN said in the Senate that by letting Great Britain have planes, destroyers, and other munitions, we have been stripping our own defenses and gambling with the security of the United States. This is a serious charge and, if it is true, it would be a conclusive objection to the whole policy. For in a situation of this sort a responsible man must always have in mind the ultimately worst possibility—namely, that the Nation might find itself standing alone with only its own forces to defend its vital interests. The question is whether the United States today is better able to defend itself alone than it was last June when the policy of aiding Great Britain was first put into effect.

Have we gained or have we lost during the nine months in which we have let the British have priority on deliveries of airplanes, have turned over the destroyers, have let them have some guns and other munitions out of our stocks? Would we be stronger today if we had clamped down an embargo and kept all these munitions in the United States? Suppose that nine months ago, when France fell and the Administration took the so-called gamble, we had followed the isolationist policy: What would have been the state of our defenses?

WE MUST remember the actual condition of affairs when the President took the decision to pass from letting Britain buy arms commercially for cash to supplying arms to Britain as a national policy. The French were beaten: The British army in France was beaten and had been evacuated to England after losing all its equipment. The defenses against invasion were desperately weak. The elimination of the French navy and the appearance of the then undiminished Italian navy had radically altered the British naval position. The Germans had seized bases from Norway to the borders of Spain, and they had an immensely superior air force.

Suppose that in these circumstances we had refused to help the British out of our available stocks of critical weapons, and had told them, furthermore, they must expect no substantial help in the future, and that so far as we were concerned, they had better make the best terms they could with Hitler.

CONCEIVABLY the British people would still have resisted, preferring to perish rather than to submit. But we should have denied them the means to resist and we should have deprived them of the hope that their resistance could in the end be successful. Perhaps they would, nevertheless, have gone on. But is there any doubt that with the adoption of such a policy here, the last shred of hope, and therefore of resistance, in France or any other European country would have been destroyed, that the organization of Europe under Nazi leadership would have become an accepted fact? Is there any doubt that an American policy which condemned Britain to defeat would have removed the last hesitation in Russia, and above all in Japan? Is there much doubt that an American policy which insured an Axis victory would have compelled every important South American country to get ready to accommodate itself to the new masters of Europe and Asia? Is there much doubt but that Portugal and Spain, and the French and Belgian lands on the west coast of Africa, and the Azores and the Cape Verde Islands in mid-Atlantic, and the Philippines, would have fallen without much delay or any substantial resistance under the rule of the triple Axis?

Nothing has stood in the way of all these dire consequences except the fact that for nine months the British Isles, as the citadel of British power throughout the world, have stood firm, and by their firmness have kept alive everywhere the spirit of resistance. If the President was gambling when he decided to aid Britain last June, has he not been vindicated overwhelmingly by what has happened in these nine months?

WE ARE TOLD that our military position is still very unsatisfactory. Perhaps it is. But nine months ago it was very much worse. We had not even authorized a two-ocean Navy. We had not even begun to have the long debate on raising a large Army. We had not yet made the appropriations to expand our capacity to produce airplanes and other vital weapons. We had not made the contracts. We had not begun to tool up. We still had to go through a long, bitter national election. Does anyone think we were better prepared nine months ago than we are now to stand alone in a world where all resistance to the triple Axis had collapsed? By the policy of aiding Britain we have already gained nine months of infinitely precious time, nine months that we might have used better, but nevertheless nine months in which we have succeeded in beginning a mobilization of our resources.

BUT THAT is not all that we have gained. We have gained the practical possibility of making certain that if, nevertheless, there is a catastrophe in Europe, the whole vast sea power of Britain—its fleet, merchant ships, and bases—will not fall into the hands of the Axis. With the help, and with the promise of more help, which we gave the British last June and during the summer and autumn, we gained nine months in which we have begun to mobilize. With the help which we shall be in a position to furnish under the lend-lease bill, we shall, if we are energetic and intelligent about it, assure ourselves that, if the worst happened, the whole British Empire and its immense resources would not be incorporated into the Axis.

How can it be maintained that we have been "stripping our defenses" when in fact we have already gained the time in which we have doubled our capacity to produce and when we have established relations with Great Britain, Canada and Australia which engage them even more deeply not to surrender and make peace at our expense? We have watched the history of France since June, and seen how near France has been to becoming enlisted as an ally of the Axis, and we have waited anxiously as the French, solely because of Britain's resistance, have themselves resisted. Imagine our position if Britain, abandoned by us and defeated by Hitler, should fall into revolution and under new leaders become incorporated in the new order of Europe and Asia. Can anyone argue that measures to prevent this from happening are not in the most fundamental sense of the words measures "to promote the defense of the United States?"

Crucial Point

By John Cowles

President of the Minneapolis Star Journal, who accompanied Wendell Willkie on his recent trip to Europe. This is the third of a series of articles by him.

Importance Of Shipping

Although the Germans' blitz bombing raids on England, with their terrible destruction of lives and property, seem to Americans to be the most important current phase of the war, responsible British leaders say shipping is the crucial thing.

COWLES

Before Hitler attempts an actual physical invasion of the British Isles, the English anticipate a concentrated assault on shipping.

They expect submarine warfare will be greatly intensified, that lightning thrusts against merchantmen by fast German raiders will be multiplied and that German dive bomber attacks on convoyed ships will be enormously increased.

The British believe the American public underestimates the critical world-wide shortage in merchant ship tonnage that will be evident before many months have passed.

In addition to having the United States Government make available the interned German and Scandinavian ships now tied up in American ports, the English urgently hope the United States will immediately embark upon a tremendously expanded program for the rapid construction of freighters.

For the United Kingdom successfully to withstand invasion, the British feel it is vital to keep the lifeline from America open. Wholly apart from the military value of the supplies America is furnishing Britain, the psychological importance of such aid is tremendous.

One morning we visited a principal English port.

The docks were humming with activity and high spirits, for on the preceding night a convoy of 15 merchant vessels had come through the German blockade without losing a ship.

Everyone was jubilant, encouraged, confident.

Whenever the German submarines or dive-bombers sink a considerable number of ships bearing planes and munitions and machine tools and food to England, there is naturally and inevitably some unfavorable effect on British morale.

It would be impossible, even if the government tried, to keep the public from knowing the approximate facts as to shipping losses.

The sailors talk when they land and the news—good or bad—percolates rapidly through the isles.

The British say that to keep the stream of supplies flowing steadily from America they have a desperate need, in order to fight off German submarines and dive-bombers, for both more destroyers and more flying boats.

If in the near future the United States would transfer to Britain around 50 destroyers and from 50 to 100 flying boats for patrol duty against German submarines, the English feel that without much question they would be able successfully to withstand Hitler's war on their shipping.

Because of the danger the German Luftwaffe might be able to attain complete daytime control of the air above Britain, English aircraft production has for many months been largely concentrated on the manufacture of fighter planes, interceptor planes and pursuit planes, all designed to bring down the German bombers.

Enormous progress has been made by Britain along this line.

Lord Beaverbrook has done a magnificent job as minister for aircraft production, and the English output of fighter planes has been growing by leaps and bounds.

Consequently it is today highly improbable that Hitler's air force, huge as it is, could attain daytime air supremacy over the R. A. F.

The British are at a heavy numeral disadvantage, however, in long-range bombers.

If they had more American long-range bombers, they would be able to make much more effective raids against the ports and docks from middle Norway to southern France, where Hitler now is organizing for his invasion attempt against the United Kingdom.

If the United States will provide Britain with "the cannon balls," to use one of Winston Churchill's pet phrases, and if England can get by for the next six months, the British believe they will be in position to win the war.

With the greatly increased number of aircraft they anticipate receiving this summer and next fall from America, plus their own steadily growing production, the English are confident that by autumn they can get, first, air equality and then, definite air superiority.

The crucial period is the weeks and months immediately ahead.

In order to keep the lifeline America open, so that the United Kingdom will be better able to withstand the expected German invasion, the transfer of more destroyers and more flying boats seems imperative.

And if America can spare more long-range bombers in the immediate future, their value to Britain will prove many times greater than would an equivalent number later on.

The crisis in the whole battle for Britain will probably come this spring.

The difference between Britain's having or not having a few more destroyers, a few more flying boats, a few more long-range bombers may decisively influence the outcome.

Capital Parade

By Joseph Alsop And Robert Kintner

The Chairmanship Of The S. E. C.

WHEN BENJAMIN V. COHEN returns from his London expedition with Ambassador John G. Winant, there is a reasonably good chance he will be made chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. He does not want the place. It will have to be kept open for him for at least two months, since the present chairman, Jerome N. Frank, is soon to ascend the Federal bench. But as coauthor of the Truth in Securities Act, the Securities and Exchange Act and the Public Utilities Holding Company Act, the SEC famous trio of enabling statutes, Cohen will probably accept the SEC chairmanship if the President can find no other candidate meeting his specifications.

ALSOP

The fact that the unwilling Cohen may well be drafted for the SEC chairmanship serves to dramatize one of the most depressing situations in Washington. Because the war has distracted attention from domestic questions, no one seems to have noticed the curious degeneration of the great administrative agencies launched by the New Deal. Yet a degeneration has certainly been in progress.

THE SEC IS A good case in point. The most controversial, most effective of all the New Deal agencies, the SEC found it easy at the start to hire the best talent available. Since the SEC was launched, however, no less than four men, Joseph P. Kennedy, James Landis, William O. Douglas and Jerome Frank, have passed through its chairmanship and on to jobs they liked better. At present, of the four regular commissioners, Leon Henderson is giving three-quarters of his time to defense work, while Ed Eicher is longingly waiting for the day when his nomination to a judgeship will be consented to by Senator Guy Gillette, whom he fought in the famous Iowa purge primary. In short, only two men on the commission, Robert Healy and Sumner Pike, are full-time workers with both eyes on the job, and only Healy can boast continuous service on the commission since its establishment.

Furthermore, where once the SEC only had to beckon to the cleverest young lawyers in the country, its subordinate personnel is now frequently depleted by resignations, and the replacements are less and less distinguished.

FINALLY, if Cohen does not take the chairmanship, there is likely to be an unseemly wrangle among the backers of the other candidates for the SEC. Among these the leaders are Abe Fortas, a protege of Justice William O. Douglas, who recently inherited Cohen's job in the Interior Department; David Schenker, the able director of the SEC investment trust study, the only New Deal investigation that finally obtained the consent of the investigated, and Ganson Purcell, director of the trading division, who has powerful support at the White House. In short, the SEC is now suffering from every ill the bureaucracy is heir to, from office politics to dry rot of personnel.

For the present, because its original momentum was so strong, the SEC still appears to retain much of its early vitality. The degenerating process, already much further advanced in other agencies, is bound to continue, however. It cannot help but do so, for the President has never really attempted to solve the basic problem of the New Deal experiment. While vastly expanding the powers and extending the responsibilities of government, he has never made the Government service sufficiently attractive to the kind of man needed to carry the new responsibilities and exercise the new powers. In the first flush of the New Deal experiment many brilliant men entered the Government, but because the financial rewards were poor and the future extremely dubious they were bound to leave again some time.

Administration, in truth, is the President's weakest point. If any proof is needed it will be found in the presence in Washington, in a handsome suite at a local hotel, of the Hon. Ed Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. The New Deal domestic program is in grave danger, for want of good men to manage it, yet the man who seems to be currently charged with supplying new Government workers is the redoubtable boss of the Bronx.

KINTNER

The Bronx psychology unfortunately dominates the Flynn effort. He apparently conceives of the United States as a sort of glorified Bronx County, and proposes to build a Nation-wide Democratic organization on the pattern of his own Bronx machine. The general objective of his labors is to acquire an unshakable hold on the State delegations, and thus to dominate the Democratic convention in 1944. He is ranging through the Government, hounding everyone from Cabinet officers to the executive officials of obscure little sub-agencies and corporations, scrounging jobs for the deserving on every side. His conception is pretty certain to come to nothing, in the first place because the wiser Cabinet officers will have no part of him, and in the second because, despite their power of confirmation, he treats the Senators as a set of glorified aldermen. Yet the mere fact that the President at least countenances Flynn's activities is sufficiently symptomatic of his lack of interest in the problem of the Government service.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

At Fort Dix

ALONG TOWARD dusk of a bitter windy day last week a group of several hundred young civilians moved along a frozen road parallel to the railroad siding, carrying small satchels and bundles. Many of them were without hats and some wore jackets instead of overcoats. They were more a crowd than a military unit, although they kept ranks of a sort, for they had left home only that day to join the Army and, in all probability, to fight in a war against Hitler's Nazi Germany and possibly Japan and, before it is over, against God only knows what mixed aggregation of young men of other nationalities and races. A soldier in uniform walked ahead, leading the irregular column against the biting wind, and the absence of a band, the absence even of a flag, emphasized the dreariness of their induction into the Army of the United States as darkness gathered over the rows of winterized tents in which they were to spend their first night in the service. The Army was busy with other duties and, after all, these new members were guaranteed such physical comfort as the post affords for the others, including shelter under canvas, which is not as miserable as it may seem in print, even in cold weather, an issue of bedding which now includes a mattress, and a warm evening meal. After supper they would return to their tents, most of them strangers to one another, and bed down for the night in strange surroundings, beginning a strange new life, and the next day they would receive uniforms and kit and begin to learn the difference between a general and a sergeant.

SO IT GOES, and it has been going for many a day, not only at Fort Dix, which lies in bleak country down toward the Jersey Coast, and the picture of the straggling civilians walking toward a highly probable war was reminiscent of those dark and bitter Communist cartoons of the Art Young type of young men marching obediently into the maw of a monster labeled Capitalist War. Yet this war has been started by German bolshevism at the signal from Bolshevist Russia, whose slightest disapproval could have prevented the horrible attack on Poland, and the capitalist American Nation only now, worse luck, is beginning to make an army to defend, not capitalism for its own sake, but the liberties which exist only under capitalism, against the armies of the dictators. That the free world of capitalism might melt from under their feet in the cause of such a war, what with the cost of arming and fighting, and drop them all into the savage world of Hitler and Stalin, is a mocking possibility. Should that come to pass, the survivors would return from war to existence under a regime unimaginably worse than the discipline of the humane, diffident and rather conciliatory officers of the new American Army.

The cold, the wind, the gloom of evening on a remote rural plain combined to stir in the imagination a sense of discrimination against these young Americans called on to abandon their accustomed life while other men, indistinguishable from them, including men scarcely able to speak the language of the country, hurried past, bound home from a day's work at high wages, building barracks and warehouses for the Army. To be sure, the first night of a young civilian in the Army is always to be one of loneliness, and the ordeal known as "beast barracks" at West Point, in which the recruits are taught etiquette and squads east, is one that graduate officers always remember with a strange pride in their own moral gameness. And be it said, too, that the new men, individually, seemed not at all depressed and made themselves at home with no outward symptoms of self pity.

BUT THE inequality of the sacrifice is too evident to be overlooked by any civilian, to say nothing of the obviousness of this inequality of the soldiers themselves. The polite political pretense which civilians so eagerly accept at face value, that these soldiers will serve only a year and only for purposes of training, is at once a sedative to the soldiers and a sop to the conscience of the civilians. That management or money would sulk or that union leaders should be entreated not to sabotage the manufacturing of weapons, planes and vehicles and thanked for not doing so is a wicked and dangerous imposition on those who trudge along the frozen ruts of the churned clay road this winter night.

Methods Of Aid

By Mark Sullivan

Great Power Of Lend-Lease Bill

UP TO NOW Britain has been getting help from the United States by primarily one method. (A second method will be alluded to later.)

SULLIVAN

This primary method has been by Britain simply ordering the supplies from private American manufacturers and paying cash for them. This is strictly a business transaction. It goes on without our Government having anything to do with it—except that there is an informal understanding by which orders from Britain are prevented from interfering with orders from our own Government. The respective orders from our Government and the British are coordinated. But it remains a private cash transaction between the British government and American manufacturers.

This has been going on since the war began and before. But last November the late British Ambassador Lord Lothian, returning from Britain and landing from a clipper at LaGuardia Field, New York, announced, with rather poignant simplicity, that Britain was coming toward the end of her cash. "Before long," he said, "other methods of payment will have to be found."

The obvious "other method" would be credit. But it could not be credit from American manufacturers, nor American bankers. For two reasons: First, manufacturers and bankers probably would not care to extend the credit; and second, it would be against the law. In our fantastically drastic attempt to be neutral we had made it a crime for any American to give credit to a nation at war.

HENCE, if Britain were to continue to get supplies from America, the obvious course was that our Government, as a government, should make a loan to Britain, or a cash gift. This was considered. In the thought our officials gave to it, they were deterred by a recollection from the Great War. During the Great War we had loaned several billion dollars to Britain. After the war Britain repaid part, but in 1933 announced that she could no longer pay. Our officials, we can surmise, felt that to propose to Congress and the country a direct loan to Britain now might encounter opposition based on memory of the former experience. So they devised another way.

There was already in existence another method by which Britain was getting supplies from America—supplies, in this case, not from American manufacturers but from the American Government. Our Government, for about a year, had been transferring to Britain supplies owned by our Army and Navy. This was done in various indirect ways. Our Government transferred 50 destroyers to Britain in exchange for some naval bases. Our Government transferred planes and other armament by a device of first turning them in to manufacturers, somewhat as a citizen turns in his used car. The manufacturer promises our Government that later on he will make new planes for our Government. Meanwhile the manufacturer sells to Britain for immediate use the planes formerly owned by our Government.

This form of help to Britain practiced by our Government has not been satisfactory. It was of doubtful legality. As Mr. Wendell Willkie said of it, "I am opposed to trying to kid along on any such basis." Moreover, it was desirable to give Britain more than could be accomplished by this indirect and cumbersome method.

Our officials, when Lord Lothian made his plea for credit, decided to throw both methods of helping Britain into one pot. They would continue the method of Government help—but legalize it and enlarge it. Also they would take on to the shoulders of our Government the whole business of supplying Britain with armament from America—they would eliminate the private transactions between Britain and American manufacturers.

WITH THIS PURPOSE, they wrote the lease-lend bill. In it they put everything into the hands of the President. He would do all the buying, for the United States and for Britain. After buying, he would keep as much as he wished for our Army and Navy, and would "sell, transfer, exchange, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of to any . . . government."

That is an enormous power. It is an enormous power within the United States, and an enormous power abroad. It is an enormous power directly expressed, and inevitably an enormous power by the implication it must lead to.

Ever since Congress received the bill, they have been trying, by amendments, to trim down the powers it grants the President. But they have discovered that, once they accept the principle of putting everything in the hands of the President, no amount of amending can prevent the bill from being an immense and momentous grant to the President of power, discretion and responsibility.

Need of Defense Nurses Told At First Lady's Press Meeting

Uncle Sam needs nurses, according to a call voiced yesterday at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference by officials of the Red Cross, the Army and the Navy.

Miss Mary Beard, national director of the Red Cross nursing service, which supplies the first reserves for the Army and Navy, said "more than 4,000 nurses must be ready by June." She said further that 21,000 nurses with proper qualifications had signified a year ago they were willing to serve, but now that the call has gone out, the response is insufficient for the work to be done.

Maj. Julia O. Flikke, superintendent of the Army Nurse Corps, said that by July 1 there must be 4,019 nurses ready for service. She said thus far only 1,203 have responded to the recent call, adding that nurses are needed to staff new hospitals and provide for overseas garrisons.

Miss Sue Dauser, superintendent of the Navy Nurse Corps, pointed out that the Naval Reserve Corps had to be expanded in proportion to the general expansion of the naval program. The present goal of the Reserve Corps is 1,500 nurses, she said, but the number may be increased as the naval program continues to expand.

Navy nurses are required to instruct enlisted men assigned to hospital duty and to serve on details where regular nurses cannot be sent. Nurses in both the Army and Navy are paid $70 a month for the first three years; $90 a month for the next three, and $130 a month after that. All expenses are paid. In order to enlist, they must be high school graduates and must have completed a regular nurse's training course.

Following the discussion regarding the need for nurses, Mrs. Roosevelt answered a variety of questions. Commenting on the President's recent statement that vital military information should not be published, the First Lady said she thought "any Congressman or anyone with common sense on a newspaper desk" should serve as his own censor in regard to revealing important military information. She emphatically denied that any Government agency had any plan to enforce censorship in any respect.

Reed Urges Civil Service Extension

is playing and is likely to play in the defense of the Nation."

The eight-man committee was equally divided on the procedure to bring attorneys under civil service. Supreme Court Justices Stanley Reed and Felix Frankfurter, Attorney General Robert Jackson and Gano Dunn, OPM engineer, recommended that Government agencies be permitted to select attorneys from "unranked" registers. An unranked register would permit a general counsel to select any person on it instead of being required to select one of the three high eligibles as is now required.

"It would be folly to place a good research man, with a retiring disposition," the four members said, "in a position requiring investigative work or trial practice, and equal folly to confine to the law libraries a man with a flair for the more tempestuous work of the trial court."

Lawyers' Committee Urged

These four members also suggested that civil service for lawyers be accomplished by creation of a committee on Government lawyers whose members would be appointed by the President.

Four other committee members, Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, William H. McReynolds, the President's administrative assistant on personnel problems; Dr. Leonard White, former Republican member of the Civil Service Commission, and Gen. Robert Wood, Sears-Roebuck board chairman, suggested "complete application of the merit system by means of a register on which names appear in order of merit as tested by examination." An unranked register, they said, would "open the door to every form of pressure and discrimination."

Justice Murphy objected to any plan for a lawyers' committee, but McReynolds, Wood and White recommended the formation of a committee on Government lawyers under the direct supervision of the Civil Service Commission. The commission would even have authority to appoint committee members.

The committee agreed that the Civil Service Commission should undertake direct and personal recruiting of young lawyers for junior attorney positions; that it should hold annual examinations for the position of law clerk, and that jobs paying more than $2,600 should be filled by promotion or transfer.

Inland Waterways Corporation employes also would be brought under Civil Service if the committee's views are put into effect. Larger appropriations to expand the professional, scientific, and higher administrative examining staff of the commission were advised.

President Roosevelt, in forwarding the report to Congress, expressed confidence that "it will help in devising effective means" of extending the Civil Service to many high Federal positions not now covered.

"We ought now to appraise the qualities necessary for those who discharge those highest functions, as well as to achieve for them an independence and security which assures the conditions for the best governmental service," the President said in his accompanying message.

"Essential to Proper Conduct"

In transmitting the report to the President, Justice Reed, committee chairman, said:

"We are satisfied that the organization of the Government service as a career on a democratic basis is essential to the proper conduct of public affairs."

The Reed committee was created more than two years ago when an argument developed between the Civil Service Commission and the departments over which jobs should be brought under civil service and which should be exempted. In general, the departments wanted to keep lawyers, scientists, administrators and other technical and professional employes out of Civil Service, the commission wanted to bring them under the merit system. The President compromised by appointing the committee, which has upheld the view of the commission.

The National League of Women Voters, in a letter to President Roosevelt, yesterday expressed approval of the Reed committee's major recommendations. "We are impressed with the significance of the report and appreciate its bearing on decisions you will be making to implement the Ramspeck Act," wrote Miss Marguerite M. Wells, league president.

Experts to Study Defense Centers' Civic Needs

Thirteen civil engineers and community planning experts have been dispatched on a Nation-wide 30-day tour to report on civic needs of defense centers, it was learned yesterday at the National Defense Advisory Commission.

The group of engineers, including Roy Brayden, city manager of Greenbelt, Md., will survey water supply, sewage disposal facilities, traffic and transportation problems and school facilities in areas about to be expanded through large-scale defense production activity.

The study is being conducted under the auspices of the commission division for State and local cooperation.

Reich Needs France, Ambassador Asserts

By Preston L. Grover

Paris (via Berlin, delayed), Feb. 23 (AP).—Even though France now is a powerless, defeated country, Germany needs her for successful reorganization of Europe, Fernand de Brinon, Ambassador of France and general delegate to German authorities, said today.

De Brinon's statement was part of a general summary of what he believed to be the position of France with relation not only to Germany, but also to the United States and Great Britain.

De Brinon favors collaboration between France and Germany. He long has striven for it, taking it up even before the outbreak of the war. With the collapse of France came the opportunity for this politician-writer to further his program.

Just Collaboration

He insisted that collaboration was all Germany asked and not a direct turnabout which would place France actively in arms against England.

Referring to the meeting of Hitler and Petain at Montoire, de Brinon declared that at no time had the Fuehrer demanded active French help against England. He quoted the German chancellor as saying, in effect:

"I do not ask for this because you could not do it. But I ask you to help me shorten the war by means in your power. I ask you to help in Africa, which is normally a complement of Europe, by opposing enterprises of Great Britain or De Gaulle in your African empire.

"This I ask you to do and for it France will find again in the new Europe the place it used to have."

Marshal Agreed

To this proposition of collaboration, De Brinon said, the marshal agreed.

De Brinon stated definitely that he thought the position of France had not been changed either by British successes in the Mediterranean or by increased aid for Britain.

"I do not believe that political collaboration, in which the marshal has taken the initiative, has been influenced by Africa developments or by President Roosevelt's plan," he declared.

"When he asked for an armistice the marshal took the side of collaboration. Everybody speaks of this collaboration but few people know what it means.

"It is not an exchange of services rendered between the victorious and the vanquished. Germany occupied two-thirds of France. This is fact. It is the richest part of our territory, which also is fact.

"Another fact is that we have no means in our power to oppose this. We accepted the armistice because we could no longer oppose with military strength. And we have no military strength now."

France herself once had an opportunity to rebuild Europe largely under her own guidance, De Brinon said, and failed.

"After 1918," he declared, "our main aim was to make a new Europe. We did not know how to take advantage of our victory to make this gesture.

No Interference in West

"It is now the hope of Germany to do what we did not succeed in doing ourselves. We must hope, consequently, that Germany will not make errors that were made between 1918 and 1939.

"In collaboration with this new Europe we should take no part in dissensions which might arise with the American continent."

He emphasized this point.

"The United States cannot reproach us," he said, "for collaborating in the new Europe when they themselves are only a unification of different states."

De Brinon was asked what possibility France had of remaining a first line power in Europe alongside victorious Germany.

"France Must Accept"

"At the moment," he said, and here he began choosing his words more carefully, "France is fallen as a great power . . . in order to remain a great power France must accept collaboration.

"In the first collaboration plans before the December 13 crisis (when Pierre Laval was ousted from the Vichy cabinet) Germany was offering us a chance to remain a great power, to keep our great world empire. We could, consequently, have remained, a great imperial power."

The interview turned to the possibility of German success in organizing Europe and whether it could be done without French help.

"It is possible," De Brinon went on, "that Germany wants to impose its law by force. But this could last only a few months, a few years at most. Peaceful reorganization of France would be impossible without the help of France. For Germany, it is necessary to collaborate with France.

"We Must Accept"

"But we are neighbors of Germany and we must not every 20 or 30 years have war opposing our neighbors — Germany beating France, France beating Germany, Germany beating France and on and on . . .

"We must understand that we are not England's direct neighbor but that we are Germany's neighbor—with all the consequences . . .

"It is for us to look for a final settlement of accounts. This is more difficult to make now than in 1918, but it must be done . . ."

Corfu Called Horror Scene After Bombing

Copyright by New York Times

Athens, Feb. 23.—The town of Corfu, which has suffered in all 54 bombardments, with sometimes as many as 400 bombs dropped on it in a single day, is the subject of a report of American authorship to the administrative committee of the American League for Aid to Greece.

Although there have been no raids upon the town in more than three weeks the situation there is set forth in its unalleviated horror. Three thousand persons live continually underground, according to the report, the vaulted chambers and galleries, which formed part of the medieval fortifications, are now, day and night, the homes of these stricken souls and are described as dripping with moisture and offering encouragement to any disease. Men, women and children cook their meals, eat and sleep in the tiny space allotted to each family. All quarters are said to be foul-smelling, filthy and infested with vermin of every kind. Furthermore, according to the report, between 13,000 and 18,000 more frequent these subterranean refuges during air raids.

Moreover, the general situation on the Island of Corfu is described as one of acute misery. Its poverty is said to be on the increase through unemployment and exhaustion of trading. Today, it is estimated that no less than 20,000 are receiving state and private aid because they have no means of livelihood. Some 5,000 who escaped to villages after the first raids are now living on the bounty of others equally destitute.

Why the Italian air force singled out Corfu as its principal target is a matter of conjecture here. British sources reveal that orders found on captured Italian pilots often indicate that no instructions had been given them and that they, in easy compliance, bomb Greece at the most convenient point and thus avoid serious danger to themselves.

The report asserts that no military objective in the accepted sense of the word exists in or near the town of Corfu. The Italians, it is suggested, took stock of the utter helplessness of the population and realized that tremendous damage could be done at almost no cost to themselves. For the most part, it is said, the working population of Corfu is housed in small buildings, one or two centuries old. These proud, picturesque edifices of a bygone day cannot be expected to withstand the fury of a modern attack. It is estimated that the number of killed and those dead from wounds amounts to at least 150 and that the number of injured is about 100. These figures, it is pointed out, are relatively small compared to the widespread material damage and the enormous human suffering which the bombings have occasioned.

Vichy Sentences Five for Trying To Join De Gaulle

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Feb. 23.—Dispatches from Morocco report that five French citizens have each been sentenced by the military court at Meknes to five years forced labor and deprivation of civic rights for having attempted "to take service in a foreign army without the consent of the French government." Two other defendants tried together with them were acquitted.

Although not indicated it is understood that the five men endeavored to join the dissident Gaullist movement; apparently they are civilians and not soldiers.

It was announced some months ago that the widest clemency would be extended to French nationals who, actuated by mistaken patriotic impulses, joined the dissident forces on condition that they surrendered and recognized the error of their ways.

British Flying Boats to Resume U. S. Trips May 1

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—British flying boat service between the United States and England will be resumed about May 1.

Paul Bewshea, representing Airways Atlantic, Ltd., said that operations would be "irregular"—as during 1940—and that the big air boats would carry occasional passengers but principally mail.

During winter months the only passenger air route from the United States to Europe has been via the Pan-American Clippers, which have Lisbon, Portugal, as their terminal.

Sock on Jaw Saves Man From Draft

Billings, Mont., Feb. 24 (INS).—A prospective draftee tonight credited a sock on the jaw with saving him from induction in the Army.

Reporting to the examining board with the just the minimum number of teeth, the draftee heard some bystander make a remark about selective service. He resented it and a fracas ensued. The draftee lost two teeth and the examining board sent him home with a rejection slip.

New Oxygen Method Seen Increasing Efficiency and Armor of Warplanes

St. Paul, Feb. 23 (AP).—A new step in the development of oxygen for high altitude flying which may mean increased safety for the war pilot as well as greater maneuverability and armament possibilities of his plane was announced today by Prof. John Akerman.

Dr. Akerman, of the University of Minnesota, addressing a conference of Minnesota engineers, said the unit developed at the school provided two important improvements:

1. Weight of equipment is reduced from 250 pounds to 30 pounds, thus lightening the warplane or providing greater armament opportunities.

2. Danger of explosion of the oxygen tank from being struck by a bullet is greatly reduced because pressures in the new unit are much lower than in existing equipment.

In commercial flying the development means, said Dr. Akerman that increased space for passengers or cargo could be provided for stratosphere flying. He estimated present equipment required eight times as much space as his unit.

The new method utilizes liquid oxygen instead of large tanks of gaseous oxygen, one liter of liquid oxygen providing, said Dr. Akerman, the equivalent of 1,000 liters of gaseous oxygen.

The apparatus consists of a tank, containing the liquid oxygen, within a large tank containing gaseous oxygen at about 60 pounds pressure. This compares with 1,800 pounds pressure under present methods.

"As the gas escapes, the pressure is lowered and automatically the liquid oxygen is squirted into the enveloping tank, to become a gas by 'boiling,'" said Prof. Akerman. "As this takes place, it reduces temperature on the tank of liquid oxygen, keeping it to the required degree of coldness."

Children Recognize Hitler, Not Governor

New Bern, N. C., Feb. 24 (U.P.).—New Bern school children, attendinng a library meeting here, apparently have been too interested in world affairs to keep up with the State.

They readily identified pictures of President Roosevelt, Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini and Josef Stalin, but none of them could identify Gov. J. M. Broughton, former Gov. Clyde R. Hoey or Representative Graham Barden, who lives here.

The school decided to hang pictures of the last three in the library.

Lack of Pants Keeps Patient in Hospital

Charlotte, N. C., Feb. 24 (AP).—Charles Chenelle, 70-year-old janitor, got pneumonia and they took him off to the hospital, but the only thing that kept him there was the lack of his pants. The nurses hid them.

"I wouldn't have stayed there, if they hadn't taken my pants," said Chenelle. "It (the hospital) ain't no place for anybody." Chenelle said he hadn't missed a day's work from illness in his life.

Inquest Today Into 16th Auto Death of 1941

D. C. traffic deaths this year .. 16
Deaths this date last year 9
District total last year 79

Coroner MacDonald today will conduct an inquest into Washington's sixteenth traffic fatality of 1941, Mrs. Nannie Gutridge, 65, of 1526 Potomac Avenue Southeast, who died in Casualty Hospital Sunday night after an accident that morning at Third and D Streets Southwest.

Mrs. Gutridge and her husband, William Gutridge, 71, who was driving, were en route to church, police said, when their auto collided with a large trailer-truck owned by Horton Lines, Inc. Mr. Gutridge received minor injuries. The driver of the truck, said by police to be H. Eugene Baber, 32, of Reidsville, N. C., has been ordered to appear at the inquest.

Auto Tag Red Tape Criticized Here

Long and tedious formalities inflicted upon Washington motorists who apply at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic for auto tags and drivers' permits were assailed yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Trade traffic committee.

George Keneipp, chairman of the group's budget subcommittee, urged the Board of Trade to support recommendations for additional personnel in both the tag and permit divisions of the Traffic Department.

"In perhaps no other department of the District Government," said Keneipp's report, "does there arise as great a number of complaints on service rendered the public as in the Department of Vehicles and Traffic."

Asserting that it is "virtually a day's job" to obtain tags, title or operators' permits, Keneipp said complaints against delays and inconvenience which characterize the work are mounting daily.

"Certainly," he said, "with an annual expenditure of more than $1,700,000 in auto taxes, motorists are not unreasonable when they expect better service from this department."

He urged the Board of Trade group to seek an additional appropriation of $22,120 to provide for an engineer aid to Traffic Director Van Duzer, an additional clerk in the tag section and four additional clerks in the permit examination section.

13 More Clerks Urged

Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District Motor Club of the American Automobile Association, told the meeting that according to standards adopted in other cities of similar size, Washington should have at least 13 additional clerks to adequately carry on the work.

Keneipp's report also struck at the short period allotted to road tests for permit applicants. Studies show, he said, that only about seven and one-half minutes are now taken to test a prospective driver behind the wheel of a car.

Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge, in response to a question, said the road test time should be doubled and described the present system as a "farce." He said the department had insufficient personnel to adequately examine applicants for permits.

1,500 Auto Tags Issued on First Day

First day "over the counter" sales of 1941 automobile tags totaled 1,500, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced yesterday.

He described the sales as "slow" and urged early applications if motorists are to avoid a last-minute rush. The new tags may be used after March 1 and must be displayed after March 31.

Mailing of applications to car owners already registered, said Van Duzer, will be completed tomorrow.

"If motorists who now have 1940 District tags on their cars fail to receive a 1941 application through the mail by Friday, I suggest they come immediately to the Traffic Department to see what is the matter," he asserted.

Some 6,000 applications are being held up either because of unsatisfied traffic violation notices or failure to notify the department of a change of address, Van Duzer added.

Treasury Offers New Securities For Notes Due Soon

The Treasury last night offered two new securities in exchange for $544,870,050 of 3⅜ per cent bonds, and $676,707,600 of 1½ per cent Treasury notes, both coming due March 15.

Secretary Morgenthau said holders of either of the old securities could subscribe for either or both of the new securities, one a 7 to 9 year, 2 per cent, and the other a 2 year, ¾ of 1 per cent note. None of the new securities was offered for cash subscription, but holders of the old bonds who prefer cash will be paid off in money rather than new securities.

Morgenthau told a press conference that the interest rates on the new securities were "slightly higher for the obvious reason that they are fully taxable."

President Roosevelt last week signed a bill abolishing tax exemption features of Federal securities under Federal tax laws.

James to Direct Statler Hotel Office

C. Henry James, of New York, has been appointed sales representative of the Hotels Statler Co. in Washington, it was announced yesterday in New York by Howard F. Dugan, vice president in charge of sales and advertising. He will occupy offices in the Investment Building.

He will give his main endeavors to the new Washington Statler, when the 1,000-room hotel is built on Sixteenth Street. Its opening is scheduled for the summer of 1942.

James, 31, a native of Mount Olive, N. C., got his taste for the hotel business as early as his student days at Duke University. There he managed a students' dining hall seating 1,000 and thus paid his tuition. After graduation he went to New York, successively holding positions in the sales promotion department of MacFadden Publications, in sales work with the National Cash Register Co. and with the sales force of Hotel Astor. Then he transferred to Statler's executive sales force.

Rep. Hill Does His Bit in D. C. Safety Crusade

Representative Hill (Democrat), of Washington, yesterday put into practical operation his belief that it is the duty of every citizen to help reduce traffic accidents by testifying against offenders.

He appeared in Police Court as a voluntary witness in a hit-and-run case in which he had apprehended the offender Saturday night.

Leo E. Molten, 28, colored, of 1418 F Street Northeast, pleaded guilty to a charge of leaving after colliding and was fined $25 by Judge John P. McMahon.

Molten was said to have struck a parked car in front of 331 Tennessee Avenue Northeast, where Representative Hill was attending a wedding anniversary celebration. Hill rushed out of the house, jumped into his car and gave chase, halting the truck driver a few blocks away.

The Congressman was accompanied by Vincent J. Keller, of 327 Tennessee Avenue Northeast, who witnessed the accident.

"There's so much hit-and-run driving going on in Washington these days," Hill explained, "that I thought this fellow should be taught a lesson.

"I think it's the duty of every citizen to help enforce such regulations and make the city a safer place."

Hill, who has been in Washington eight years, said he thought traffic conditions in the Capital in general are "pretty bad."

"They'd never get by with what they do here out in my State," he said.

He suggested that stricter enforcement of regulatory curbs on jay walkers and taxi drivers who hold up streetcars by turning in the middle of the streets might improve conditions.

1,500 Store Clerks Celebrate

George Washington had a second birthday anniversary yesterday.

At least, it amounted to that, for more than 1,500 chain grocery employes in the District who had a day off.

Under their union contract, the employes of the Safeway, Atlantic & Pacific and American stores were to have a vacation on Washington's Birthday. Later, it was discovered that February 22 fell on Saturday, the week's busiest shopping day. A swap was made. The grocers worked Saturday and took yesterday off instead.

Pegler Assails Labor Racketeers Before House Committee

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Westbrook Pegler, columnist for The Washington Post, told the House Judiciary Committee yesterday that the present policy of the Federal Government is to "force unwilling workers to join labor unions" and then give them "no protection from union bosses."

Sitting quietly in a big red chair in a House hearing room, Pegler outlined to the committee for two hours what he knew about labor racketeering. The judiciary group is investigating impediments to the national defense program and considering proposals to restrict strikes in defense industries. Further hearings have not yet been scheduled.

Among the objects of his unsparing attacks were a number of A. F. L. officials and former officials, whom he variously termed racketeers, criminals and crooks; President William Green of the A. F. L. for giving them "approval and encouragement," and the recent Supreme Court decision in the Hutcheson case, which he said "flouted the rights of innocent victims" in jurisdictional strikes.

Declaring that it is "an obvious obligation on the part of the Government" to protect men from racketeering union chieftains, Pegler said he would suggest no specific legislation. But, he commented, "it's unwise to trust to luck when you can take a precaution."

Pegler told the committee that local officials are sometimes "afraid to attack these criminals because they will be called enemies of organized labor."

And, he added, many honest union members regard these fellows (dishonest leaders) as less dangerous enemies than the employers. They are willing to submit to a little larceny."

Pegler told the committee that, so far as he knew, labor troubles had not interfered with the national defense program. But he was skeptical of the argument of Defense Commissioners Knudsen and Hillman that reliance be placed on cooperation with labor leaders.

Asserting that he didn't see the reason for "all this confidence" in union officials, Pegler said "I know there are a great many Communists in C. I. O. unions—"why trust them?" He pointed out that a row over a "microscopic" matter might end up in a general strike.

Some of the union leaders, Pegler stated, would "create trouble" by threatening strikes "for a bribe." He said he did not contend that that attitude was characteristic; but he maintained that "well over 25 per cent of the A. F. L. membership" belongs to unions dominated by racketeers of one type or another.

Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, asked Pegler if he thought workers should lose their preferential status in the draft if they struck.

"No," the columnist replied. "That would be a threat to abridge the right to strike in the case of a legitimate grievance."

"If they were engaged in essential war work, would that make any difference?" Walter pursued.

"I don't see that it would," Pegler answered. He told the committee that he believed in organized labor, and in protecting individual rights against both employers and unions.

Pegler maintained that under the influence of the Wagner Act, Supreme Court decisions and other sanctions, the Government "drives" workers into unions and "refuses to take any steps to protect these unwilling members."

Green, long a target for Pegler's printed attacks, has used his "moral influence" in favor of some of the A. F. L. racketeers, Pegler charged. "Most discouraging," Pegler said, "has been the resentful attitude of William Green and the contention of union officials that to attack these and other shocking abuses is to attack the interests of the working people."

Pegler told the committee that Green and Joseph Padway, A. F. of L.'s general counsel, have with "culpable negligence" cooperated with George Scalise, international president of the Building Service Union, a "convicted white slaver" and "thieving racketeer."

The witness spoke of misdeeds of Willie Bioff, of the Stage Hands and Movie Employes Union; told how Green "insisted" that John P. Nick, a "crook," be seated in an A. F. of L. convention; said that the Hod Carriers Union, which held its last convention in 1911, charged from $23 to $50 as "the price of a job" on national defense projects; and described how the treasurer of a New York electricians' local went to Sing Sing for robbing the beneficiaries of deceased members.

He said that one union had charged a $3,000 initiation fee; and described the practice of a "powerful local boss" of a glaziers' union in cashing large checks at a Florida dog-racing track and a Chicago gambling house against the union's pension fund.

"Elections are crooked and farcical accounts are juggled, and known criminals who never have been convicted are maintained in office by manipulation and terrorism," Pegler said of several of the unions under fire.

The witness declared that Joseph Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, obtained a salary, including expense accounts, of perhaps $80,000 per annum. Petrillo can alter the union's constitution at will, Pegler observed.

"Petrillo says he's a dictator," Pegler stated. "He's told me that—but he says: 'I'm a good dictator.'"

Columnist Pegler—Unsparing in his attacks on officials and former officials of the A. F. of L., Westbrook Pegler, columnist for The Post, yesterday outlined to the House Judiciary Committee for two hours what he knew about labor racketeering

It is "an obvious obligation on the part of the Government to protect men" from racketeering union chieftains, Pegler said.

Device Enables Trucks To Become Ambulances

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Store delivery trucks now carrying everything from bedsteads to derbies will be employed in future District emergencies to take injured persons to hospitals.

The transition from truck to ambulance costs $25, plus the cooperation of the truck owner. It hinges on a mechanical device developed by Miss Mabel T. Boardman, national secretary of the American Red Cross, as a result of thought about the Knickerbocker Theater disaster January 28, 1922, and the critical need then for carrying the injured.

Miss Boardman evolved a design for a set of adjustable iron frames to which are attached four stretchers—two lower, two upper. The frames "telescope" so as to fit any size truck. That is all there is to it.

But it works and, as a consequence, the District Red Cross Chapter now has many emergency ambulances available instead of the two it has owned.

The American Red Cross yesterday approved the device, and chapters throughout the Nation will be asked to adopt it. The District chapter has placed an order for 100 with a Baltimore manufacturer, at cost of $25 each. A number of delivery truck owners have volunteered use of their vehicles at the chapter's call.

PORTABLE COTS. Miss Mabel T. Boardman, national secretary of the Red Cross, inspects the new device after it has been placed in vehicle

The Red Cross emphasized yesterday, when a trial was given the new ambulance at Seventeenth and D Streets Northwst, that it has undertaken the innovation with no specific emergency in mind.

Miss Boardman explained that, insofar as the welfare organizations are concerned, the invention sends ambulance overhead costs out the window. The frames and stretchers require no garage nor mechanical attention. First-aid crews, trained in their work, will be recruited on a voluntary basis. When an emergency occurs, the trucks will be driven speedily to first-aid stations, pick up the stretcher frames, and proceed to the emergency scene.

The unit has been named the Truck Ambulance Company.

Taking the first ride yesterday, as volunteers, were William Armstrong, field commissioner of health and safety, Boy Scouts; Ben Buckner, jr., assistant executive, Boy Scouts; Woodrow W. Nealey, of the First Aid Department, District Red Cross, and Claude M. Maxwell, first-aid instructor, District Red Cross Chapter.

The four were lifted in, in precise simulation of an emergency.

Show Your Gayest Colors This Spring—But Be Sure to Know Them First

Greens and Beiges In Lead; Appear In Many Shades

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

IT MATTERS not whether you are 16 or 60, it's smart to show your colors this spring. If Eve had it to do over, she would probably still choose the fig leaf green for her wardrobe. Perhaps that is why green is one of the leading colors this season—there is a little bit of Eve in every woman.

Green is responsible for some of the most striking color combinations this spring. There is every shade imaginable—grass blade green, bud, moss green and verdant green. Different sections of the country even have their own preference for greens. New York showed Kelly green at Fashion Futures, while Chicago showed lime tones at its opening recently.

Though green is considered one of the best sellers for spring, it is not to be outdone by beige. In fact, beige, as a basic color, has gained a slight edge on green because it combines so well with other colors. Beiges range all the way from sponge shades to vibrant Brazilian hues. But Color Affiliates, that famous group of fashion pace-setters who have worked together to match the clothes and accessories you want for spring, have done their job to perfection. A woman starting out to match her beiges will no longer find the old difficulties. Beiges combine smartly, too, with greens, reds, blues and white.

Traced to Eden

The vogue for color in women's attire started as far back as the Garden of Eden—according to Margaret Hayen Rorke, managing director of the Textile Color Card Association. "The traditional first raiment of Adam and Eve was green," said Mrs. Rorke. "But," she continued, "since it is impossible for our imagination to picture a paradise without glorious, vibrant colors, it's a safe bet that Eve was not content with monochromatic harmony in fashion. Although the first chronicler ungraciously neglected the recording of Eve's phychological color reaction, it's quite certain that she would never have partaken of that seductive apple if it had not been red, a luscious, flirtatious, tantalizing red!" There is no mincing of reds this season, either. They are all the name implies.

Then, too, there is a revival of South American hues (Brazilian especially), patriotic and island colors for spring and summer outfits. Violets, pale pastel colors like pink, blues, accented grays and flower colors, and colors straight from the paint box of the American Indian are also in vogue.

The trick is to choose colors that readily fit you—your personality and coloring. The words of Prof. Teufelsdroekh from Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," express the importance of color: "Again, what meaning lies in Colour! From the soberest drab to the high-flaming scarlet, spiritual idiosyncrasies unfold themselves in choice of Colour; if the Cut betoken Intellect and Talent, so does the Colour betoken Temper and Heart."

Key to Personality

Juick judgment may be made on first appearances, but complete attractiveness follows through to personality. The styling and lines of a dress are vital to the face and figure, but it is color that really enhances a woman's manner and charm. Red often contradicts a languid, retiring sort of person, completely camouflaging her real beauty.

When it is realized that red is the most exciting of colors, blue the most subduing, yellow the most cheering and green the most tranquil, it is obvious that there is more to the spectrum than meets the eye.

Green has always been considered a difficult color to wear. But this season there are so many different shades that almost any woman can find one to suit her. It has always been considered that redheads can wear green well. Dark-haired women will find the deep, rich shades of green look well on them. The dark, vibrant green we have associated with the South American colors is an example. Blondes, too, can wear green, but they should choose the cooler and less brilliant tones, such as bud green and, even better, the turquoise shades.

Beige will serve double duty this pring. For the woman who finds green too severe for an entire costume, beige is an excellent touch to tone it down. Just a bit of light color relieves the boldness of large areas of green or any other color.

In addition to being an accessory color, beige can stand on its own for an entire outfit. But here again, even the person who is quite dark and makes a striking background for beige will find it is more appealing if a bit of bright color is worn with it. Blondes can even wear it if they combine just a tiny touch of color—a cocoa brown, a rich royal blue, violet or pink. There are also deeper shades of beige to combine with the lighter ones. Brunettes will combine some of the richer colors, such as red, dark green, violets and even white with their beiges. In fact, most colors, if combind with a little finesse, are wearable this season.

The maid who chooses green this spring will wear it smartly as an accessory bit. This daisy print afternoon dress in red and white has a forest green adjustable side apron. A quick-change act makes the apron become a cape. The Milan straw hat is edged with green crepe and the bag is green calfskin

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Husband's Prolonged Alcoholism Worries Wife, Particularly His Insistence on Driving While Drunk; Is There Any Help for Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have been married ten years and have three lovely children. We are quite young,—and I think that accounts for much of our trouble. We both lack maturity,—in different ways. But mature or not, we have the children to rear,—and how to do this adequately, in view of our shortcomings, is my problem.

My husband did not finish college. After we were married, it was impossible to continue in school (as he had planned to do), and I gave up my job just before the first baby was born and have never worked since. At that time, he was working temporarily at various jobs. Then he was out of work for a while, and finally found the position he has since held,—for the past six years. But I know the fact that he never was specially trained to "make his mark in the world," as he would like to do, is getting him down.

We have our financial troubles, but we could conquer those in time, I feel sure, if only we could overcome his greatest handicap,—namely, his alcoholism. I know you are going to tell me that an alcoholic is ill; that he needs treatment suited to his sickness. But such a suggestion is futile. He would have a fit if he even knew I was asking anyone's advice. And only occasionally will he ever admit that he has been drunk. At his worst, he has never,—according to his story,—had more than three drinks."

He insists on driving regardless of his condition. This worries me more than anything. But his reply always is: "I can take care of myself," or, "I haven't hit anyone yet, have I?" I am accused of exaggerating and falsifying; of "trying to make a fool of him," etc., if I try to restrain him. I can only pray God (a fool's prayer) that nothing will happen. Knowing him, I believe that such an eventuality would surely kill him. But there is nothing I can do to protect him, other than to extract a promise from him, now and then, that either he won't drink again or won't drive while drinking. Yet he drinks to excess at times when he knows full well he is going to drive the children and me home.

He first started drinking heavily about five years ago. After a few months, he swore off, and was on the wagon for six months. I was delighted and thought my troubles were over. Then he began again, with an occasional drink. Now, for the past year and a half, he has been drinking steadily and more heavily,—and during the last two months, he has been intoxicated two or three days every week.

He has many good points. He is very kind and affectionate, morally clean and also intelligent. I have always considered him worth my worries and have unfailingly believed his periodic pledges to reform. Indeed, I must truthfully say that even today, after a "repeat" performance, I still believe in the honesty of his good intentions.

Once, in an effort to bring him around, I tried to leave him. But his family stepped in, when I confided in them, and talked the whole thing over with us. They prevailed upon us to reconsider, which we were both glad to do, because of the children. But the very next month he was drinking again, and blaming me for humiliating him by my "intention to leave." I have never confided in his family since. Also, he hates certain members of my family because their estimate of his behavior is distinctly unsympathetic. And his attitude toward them, and toward certain of our friends is: "To hell with them."

Is there any help for us? I am hoping for at least a paragraph of advice. And if you think I need a stern lecture, don't hesitate to give it to me. Gratefully,
MUDDLED WIFE.

Wife's Dependent Mein Aggravates Situation

DEAR M. W.: No one can help your husband so long as he is unwilling to face the fact of his growing enslavement to alcohol and admit that it requires corrective treatment. You, probably, can help him least of all, because you are emotionally involved with his weakness. In other words, with all his faults—including the criminal negligence of his attitude in insisting upon driving when drunk—you are so limply dependent upon him as the emotional mainstay of your existence that you dare not confront, with uncompromising honesty, the issues presented by his alcoholic behavior.

When a woman takes refuge, as it were, behind small children's skirts, in pleading supposedly incontrovertible reasons why it seems best to continue a hazardous, warped existence with a drunken husband and father,—you may be sure that woman is held in thrall more by a conviction of personal inadequacies than by courageous, protective concern for the other persons immediately involved. The consensus opinion of those who are most successful in aiding drunkards to reform,—as well as among reformed alcoholics themselves,—is that whoever sentimentally condones a drunkard's misdeeds, or attempts to stand between him and the consequences of his arrant selfishness, is actually encouraging him along the downward path.

Only when an incipient drunkard is brought face to face with the realization that he must make a final, "either-or" choice between the good things of life, on the one hand, and the progressively debasing, exclusive companionship of "the bottle," on the other hand, does he begin to take account of whither he is drifting, and to collect all his forces for a fight-to-the-finish against alcholism,—providing, that is, he has sufficient judgment and character left to prefer the high road to the low road through life.

Whoever leaves the alcoholic to reflect, alone and unconsoled upon the immediate and potential penalties of his obstinately cherished "false appetite," is committing him to the one situation which contains, for him, the seeds of salvation,—supposing he is basically amenable to salvation. And whoever permits an alcoholic to put him,—the innocently injured party,—on the defensive, as allegedly responsible for, or contributive to, the drunkard's progress, is ignobly participating in a living lie, as you well know. No good to anybody can come of such despicable mutual hypocrisy.

Your husband's performance is "escapist," of course. Because, in his sober senses, he must concede that he is one of life's "little men,"—thus far, at least, in his unfoldment—he seeks momentary escape from this challenging fact by drinking himself into states of illusory grandiosity. And it is also possible that he drinks to forget that he is married. Maybe he would like to be released from the presumably lifelong responsibilities of marriage and parenthood, and is unconsciously trying to wash himself out of his berth on a rising tide of spiritous liquor.

In any event, you are behaving with all the organization and foresight of an ostrich hiding his head from an approaching enemy, in pretending,—between your husband's drinking bouts,—that all is well, and this time's he's on the wagon for life. You are living in a situation that is just as bad as—and never better than—the periodic alarms you experience when he is on the rampage. The foundations of your children's security, as well as your own, are slowly rotting beneath your feet,—as your husband increasingly disdains effort at self-control and further declines to concede that he is in any way at fault, while you sit and wait for a miracle to pass that will restore him to perennial sane sobriety.

Your one possible chance of invoking his total, lasting reform lies in refusing, completely and irrevocably, to live with him if he goes on drinking. If life without you is unthinkable to him (which is your attitude toward life, sans him, just now) he will find the means and the strength to overcome his alcoholism, if such is the price he must pay for your companionship. Yet, if he is determined to drink, come what may, it is my long-range reckoning that you would find greater happiness, in more continuous form, away from him than with him, once you had accomplished the painful severance of the relationship. If Effect of Diet Shows in Face Special Exercise Is Necessary

By Ida Jean Kain

SO REDUCING shows in your face and throat first! Well, don't use that as an excuse for letting your figure go. You need a slimming program to zip off the inches and ounces, trim down your measurements and tone up your figure. Here's the program that will do it for you and make a new woman of you in the lightly on the face. Remove with bargain.

First-aid treatment for face and throat is to cleanse thoroughly with cream, massaging the cream well into the throat and tissue, wash with warm water and mild soap, dry and apply a good lubricating cream. Now you are ready for a little exercise.

Tense the muscles of the throat, slowly turn the head until the chin is in line with the shoulder, then very slowly circle the head around until chin is pointed over the other shoulder, describing a half-circle with the point of the chin. The second exercise is to lie on back on the bed, head hanging over edge, then lift head to bed level, lower slowly and repeat three times.

Circle Exercises

Straightening the shoulders will help to give you a lovelier head carriage. Make backward circles with arms held out at shoulder level; first small circles, then larger ones. A couple of dozen in all will do nicely.

Now pull the midsection slim. With arms overhead, stretch upward and from this position bend sidewards, back to position and bend to the opposite side. Keep the lower abdominal muscles pulled up and in. You can whittle the midriff down fast if you concentrate the pull between the hip bones and rib cage and really bend at the waist.

The best tummy-flattening exercise is to contract the abdominal muscles and straighten the lower back. Lying on back on floor, knees bent, feet on floor, pull up and in with lower abdominal muscles digging the small of back into floor. From this position, bend one knee to chest, then both knees; then with one leg down, bend other knee and twisting at waist, touch point of knee to floor on opposite side.

Snub Fats, That's All

You probably need a couple of hip slimmers; try leg swinging from standing position, swing up in front and away up in back, 10 times, 25 times and later 100 times with each leg. Finish with a rolling exercise by lying on back and rolling from one side across hips and back to other side. Rolling smoothes away all bulges.

Your diet? You don't need one. Just trim off the fat from your meat and skip the gravy, limit the butter to one pat per meal, go easy on mayonnaise and cream and all fats. And avoid rich desserts. Use fresh fruits, green vegetables, lean meat, eggs, cheese and whole grains—that's a beauty diet. By cutting calories here and there you can delete 500 daily and lose 8 ounces a week. That will never show in your face.

As a beauty and health measure add to your daily calesthenics a 45 minute walk every day of your life. All a beauty program amounts to is well-disciplined muscles, thorough cleansing for the skin, fresh air and intelligent eating.

Spring Dish

ONE OF the first signs of spring is the craving for something new. You dream luxuriously of new house furnishings, new cars, new hats and not the least for new things to eat. It's fun to dream and easy on the budget so let your dreams soar high and no doubt a new dish will come out of the dreams.

Someone recently dreamed an almost ready-to-serve dish and thereupon concocted a meat pie using crispy crackers, ground round steak, grated cheese and canned tomatoes, with a few dashes of flavoring. Try the recipe for this meat pie for it works magically.

Cracker Meat Pie

Cook 1 cup of diced celery and ½ cup minced onion in a very small amount of water—not more than ¼ cup—until tender. Fry 1 pound ground round steak in hot fat just long enough to turn it grey in color. Add the cooked celery and onions, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire, salt and pepper, a dash of Tabasco, 2 cups grated cheese and 1 No. 2½ can tomatoes and mix well. Place ½ the meat mixture on the bottom of a greased casserole, cover with a layer of large square crackers (whole or crumbled) and put the remaining meat mixture on top. Garnish the top with crackers and some grated cheese. Bake in oven at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Smooth Manners Aid Popularity

"A DELIGHTFUL GIRL!" he thought, until he saw her way of buttering bread—holding it in midair, flat on her palm. And many girls like to think a man doesn't notice a little thing like your table manners!

If you don't know the correct way to eat bread, if you spear your vegetables with the end of your fork, if you pour salt for your celery on the tablecloth, watch out! That attractive man you'd like to impress may be making mental notes NOT to ask for a date.

The type of girl a man likes to be seen with will break off a piece of bread and hold it on the edge of her butter plate while she butters it. She takes up her vegetables on the flat part of her fork and pours salt for her celery on her plate.

Such little points aren't difficult to keep in mind, but what a difference they make to your social rating and to your poise!

Garnish for Ham

Here is a new garnish for ham which gives a delicious glaze and flavor: Mix ¼ teaspoon each of powdered cinnamon and cloves with ⅔ cup orange marmalade. Beat with a fork and spread over the ham during the last 30 minutes of baking.

Evie Robert Refutes Face-Lifting Rumor After Visit to the Windsors

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF YOU STILL have your doubts as to whether the Duchess of Windsor had her face lifted a few weeks ago, Evie (Mrs. L. W.) Robert can set you right. Having just returned to town after a visit to Nassau, where she and Chip were received at Government House by the Duke and Duchess, Evie knows whereof she speaks . . . and she is not one to beat about the bush.

Hope Ridings Miller

"She certainly has NOT had her face lifted," said Evie when I asked her point-blank about it. "But she is lovely. So much more so than you'd ever think by looking at her pictures. You see, it's her coloring. Those pretty blue eyes, a flawless complexion, and the most charming manner you can imagine."

The invitation to call at Government House came as something of a surprise to the Roberts. Although Evie knew the duchess long before she was a duchess—back in the Washington phase of her career, to be exact—and had some hopes of seeing her, she wasn't going to presume on an old friendship. Accordingly, she and Chip arrived at the resort and started the usual sight-seeing round, without getting in contact with anybody at Government House. But they were in Nassau only a few hours when an invitation arrived from the duke and duchess, and the next morning, shortly before noon, the Roberts were being received by the world-famous couple.

The duchess, Evie said, was trimly turned out in a light blue wool suit, very tailored and very becoming. On one lapel was a pin of semiprecious stones in flower design, and a matching ornament in front accented her close-fitting little hat, which was of the same material as the suit. The duke wore a muted plaid sports suit, and according to Evie, "looked ten years younger than he did ten years ago." Well, while he and Chip discussed some interests they have in common, Evie and the duchess were having an intimate little chat about practically everything you can imagine.

"There's nothing high-hat about the duchess," said Evie, as I pressed her for details. "She likes people, and she's as interested as the next person in keeping up with old friends. So we had quite a talk."

I gather she and Evie could have continued the conversation for hours—and would have—if an official appointment with a group of golfers hadn't already been arranged.

Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman ("Aunt Bessie") is still a guest at Government House, and before the Roberts left, she came in to see them.

Also vacationing in Nassau are Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, who went over on the same boat as the Roberts. Incidentally, in the course of the trip, Evie and Bea Fahnestock had quite a discussion as to whether they would curtsey when, and if, they saw the duchess.

"I simply couldn't," said Mrs. Fahnestock. "I'd feel just too foolish."

Evie, on the other hand, said she'd bend a knee without a moment's hesitation. "When you're in Nassau, you're on British soil, and curtseying is the custom. Why I'd kiss her hand, if custom decreed it."

So Evie did curtsey. Whether Mrs. Fahnestock didn't, I can't tell you. She and Mr. Fahnestock did not go to Government House with the Roberts. I don't know that they have gone there at all.

After their Nassau sojourn, Chip and Evie returned to Florida by private plane and spent the weekend with Mrs. Edward Stotesbury at her Palm Beach home. They returned home directly from there.

Evie will entertain at two luncheons this week—the first today, when she will gather in 20 guests at the 1925 F Street Club; the second on Thursday when, at the same place, she will fete Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy.

On March 21, Chip and Evie will be in Corpus Christi, Tex., for the opening of the new naval air base, and that weekend they will go to New Orleans for the Southern Governor's Conference. And then, Evie will go on to Sarasota, Fla., where she will see the outstanding celebrities of the season—Gargantau and Toto! Evie will be there in response to a special invitation from John Ringling North.

AS I WRITE THIS, five Junior Leaguers are putting the finishing touches on "The Story of Katheleen," a one-act play based on case material from the Traveler's Aid Society. As you read, the same five probably will be suffering a preliminary round of "mike fright." But a few hours later this morning the five will be poised, script in hand, and ready to go on the air.

The time of the broadcast is 11 o'clock, and the station is WMAL. The five performers will be Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mrs. John Ward Cutler, Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant, Mrs. William Hitt and Mrs. Robert W. Wilson. Mrs. Ernest G. Warren has written the script, which is based on a true story from the files of the Traveler's Aid Society, one of the many welfare organizations regularly drawing volunteer workers from the Junior League.

Engagement Announced

Bachrach.

MISS THELMA MARGARETTE SPEER,
whose engagement to Lewis S. Robinson, of Alexandria, is made known by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman A. Speer. The wedding will take place March 22

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S forthcoming trip to Florida, which was publicized somewhere as "a month's vacation," will take only 10 days, and it won't be exactly a vacation, either. At her press conference yesterday, the First Lady announced that she would be off to the South on March 6; would be away from Washington less than two weeks, and would write her daily column and attend to her daily batch of mail as usual.

"But we will rest some," plaintively put in Miss Malvina Thompson, Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary. The First Lady added that they would, after the column and the mail were disposed of each day.

Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at a formal luncheon today and will attend a church tea this afternoon. Tonight she will accompany the President to the National Theater to see Alexander Woollcott in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Later, she plans to look in on the annual Thrift Shop Ball at the Sulgrave Club.

A day in New York is on the First Lady's schedule for tomorrow. Thursday, she will attend an afternoon meeting here of the Alliance for the Guidance of Rural Youth and, in the evening, she and the President will see some motion pictures made by Dwight Long, of San Francisco, and Dr. and Mrs. William Mann, of Washington. A meeting at Princeton, N. J., is on Mrs. Roosevelt's calendar for Friday morning, and that evening she will attend the dinner here of the Federal Bar Association. Her next press conference is tentatively set for Wednesday, March 5.

Daughter Feted By Mrs. Marye On Birthday

Celebrating her daughter's birthday anniversary, Mrs. George Thomas Marye entertained at a dinner party at the 1925 F Street Club last evening. Mrs. William D. Thomas, guest of honor, arrived in town only a few hours before the party.

Mrs. Marye gathered about 30 guests in to fete her daughter. Music was played following dinner and many friends joined the party for the latter part of the evening. This birthday party is an annual celebration. The only thing missing at this year's fete was Mrs. Thomas' daughter, Miss Mayre Thomas, who celebrates the same natal day as her mother. At present she is in school at San Rafael, a Dominican convent in California. Next year the sub-deb plans to come East and will be in school at Foxcroft, in Middleburg.

Last night's party was also in the nature of a farewell, for the hostess will be off shortly for her annual sojourn in Florida. She will go early next month. Mrs. Marye will hardly have returned to her apartment at the Dresden before taking her trip to the West Coast with Mrs. Sydney Cloman.

Also shaking the Washington dust from her heels early in March will be Mrs. William D. Thomas. She will return to her Bar S Bar ranch, near Reno, where she raises horses and Afghan hounds.

Benefit Given By Mrs. Beale

At another in her series of teas for British War Relief, Mrs. Truxtun Beale entertained yesterday afternoon at her famous home, Decatur House, on Lafayette Square.

Prime object of yesterday's party was to hear reports from the various guests on the progress of the plans for the forthcoming Piccadilly Arcade, for the benefit of the Royal Air Force. Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley and Lady Palffy assisted at the tea table.

Mrs. Parker Seats Guests by Poems On Place Cards

Entertaining at a novel luncheon, yesterday, Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker wrote poems about each of her guests and those attending located their places by finding a suitable poem. The luncheon was given in the private dining room at Pierres.

Guests included Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary, and her sister, Miss Mary Louise Morton; Mrs. John Kee, Mrs. John Murphy, of Baltimore; Mrs. Robertson Pickett, Mrs. Minnie Briggs, Mrs. James Boyd, Mrs. Frederick Kenworthy, Mrs. Robert Horner, Mrs. John Donaldson and Mrs. Theodore Tiller.

Still others there were Mrs. Rosemund Gaydash, Mrs. J. Monroe Hunter, Mrs. Helen Macan, the Misses Margaret and Mary Barney, Miss Margaret Lunn, Miss Gladys Lofton, Mrs. Edwin Bayly, Mrs. Selben Ely, Mrs. Earl McChesney, Miss Florence Locke, Mrs. Henry Guthrie, Miss Minnie Byers and Miss Mary Robinson.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

ANTHONY BIDDLE, who now has the mouthfilling title of Ambassador to Poland, Denmark, Norway and the Netherlands, is looking forward to his coming stay in London. After his hair-raising experiences in Poland last year, an existence which isn't punctuated by an occasional bomb must seem a little flat.

DUDLEY HARMON

The tall, lean-faced envoy is already dashing about the country in line with his new duties. He met the new Polish Ambassador at the dock in New York the other day and then tore up to Canada to have a look at the training camp for flyers conducted by the refugee Norwegian government.

THE DIPLOMATS present career is a far cry from the days when he was famous for his devotion to Palm Beach, where he was first president of the Bath and Tennis Club. The real contrast came during the war on Poland. After the fall of Warsaw the Ambassador and his family made a hasty trip of several hundred miles to the Russian frontier. There, while fighting raged above and around them, they slept on straw in a shack which for the moment had become the American Embassy.

Not everybody knows that Mr. Biddle was once an enthusiastic promoter of boxing. Some fifteen years ago he became nominal manager of a Belgian middleweight, and often went to the gymnasium to watch his fighter train. The night the match came off, he staged an enormous party afterwards at which pugilists and society stared uneasily at one another.

Mr. Biddle's entrance on a diplomatic career followed many years as a businessman. He has been at it only since 1935 but within two years he was promoted from Minister to Norway to Ambassador of Poland. He learned to ski in Norway and both he and Mrs. Biddle play good enough tennis to win an occasional resort championship.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY of State and Mrs. A. A. Berle, who have been more or less shunted about from house to house this season, have signed a year's lease on the William Flathers' home on Nebraska Avenue. The Flathers will take an apartment. Mr. and Mrs. Berle first lived in Woodley, but were obliged to move when the owners, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, came back to town. They went next door to a house which, after they had been there a few weeks, was sold to the Swiss government as a legation. The Minister and Mme. Bruggmann don't plan to occupy it until extensive alterations are completed.

MARGOT LEE and Walter Mahony of New York expect to make it a June wedding but not just because this is the traditionally romantic month for brides. Mr. Mahony has to do a period of naval training which is expected to be completed about that time. Miss Lee spent the past weekend in Greenwich, Conn., visiting her aunt, Mrs. Edgar Arnold.

LINES PENNED under a palm tree in Florida:

"Hobe Sound is only 40 minutes by motor from Palm Beach and we have been down twice, but like it much better here. It is a very simple outdoor life and everyone is asleep by 10:30. There are quite a few from Washington here. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne have taken a house for the season and have as guests Mrs. Nathan Wyeth of the Capital and two friends from Baltimore. Mrs. F. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart is in her own home. Mrs. Cary D. Langhorne is at the Jupiter Island Club, having flown down in her own plane. Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss has taken a house and has with her Mrs. Mondell Gregg. Mrs. Ralph Worthington is at the Jupiter Island Club, as are the Arthur Ballantines of New York. He was Undersecretary of the Treasury under Hoover. Arthur Bradley Campbell drove up from Palm Beach the other day.

"But just so you won't think it's too much of a lotus eater's life, I'll add that it has been pretty cold even in Florida."

Party Given For the Godoys

The Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and Signora Lais entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at their home on Bancroft Place. Guests of honor were the retiring Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Godoy, who will leave shortly for their homeland. This afternoon the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Pardo will be hosts at cocktails in honor of the Godoys.

South American diplomats attended the Lais party, as well as naval attaches of the various countries. Assisting Signora Lais was her daughter, Signorina Edna Lais; Signora Infante, wife of the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy, and Signora Gaeta, wife of the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy.

New Brazilian Minister Gives Dinner Party

Paulo G. Hasslocher, newly appointed Minister of Brazil, was host to a dinner party last evening in the Shoreham blue room in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Decio De Pauls Machado, whose banana plantation in Brazil is the largest private-owned one in the world.

In the company were the Brazilian Minister - Counselor and Mme. Arno Konder, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, the Columbian Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Gen. Allen Gullion, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Col. and Mrs. W. F. Nicholson, Lorenzana Camacho, Miss Azadia Newman, Miss Meredith Howard and Miss Madeline Austin.

Miss Garner Wed in Texas To Mr. Currie

Of wide interest in Washington is the wedding of Miss Genevieve Garner and John James Currie, jr., which took place last evening at 8 o'clock in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Amarillo, Tex. The bride is well known here, where she frequently visited her grandparents, former Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner. She attended Arlington Hall School in Arlington, Va. Her grandparents traveled from their home in Uvalde, Tex., to attend the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tully C. Garner, of Amarillo. Mr. Currie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Currie, also of Amarillo. The Right Rev. Goodrich R. Fenner, uncle of the bride, officiated at the ceremony. Easter lilies and smilax decorated the church.

Given in marriage by her father, she wore a cream satin gown cut on simple lines. The tiny collar of her frock was made of pearls. Her full tulle veil fell from a pearl band and she carried a spray of lilies of the valley on her white prayer book.

Miss Lil Youngs served as maid of honor. She wore an ice blue marquisette gown and carried a bouquet of yellow jonquils and roses. Hugh Currie, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers included Turney Fletcher, William Stack, John Adams and Oliver Birins.

When the couple left for their trip to Florida and West Indies, the bride wore a beige ensemble. They will live in Amarillo. Both Mr. and Mrs. Currie were graduated from Texas University.

George Abell, Andrew Wylie Fete Col. Shipp

One of the gayest of the pre-Lenten parties in town was the after-theater fete given last evening by George Abell and Andrew Wylie at the latter's home, 1205 Thomas Circle.

Many of the 30 or more guests came on after attending the Ballet Russe, and a number of them after seeing the opening of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" at the National Theater.

The party was in honor of Col. William E. Shipp, who will leave here soon to sail for his new post as Military Attache to Bulgaria. Among those noted were the Secretary of the Netherlands Legation Dr. H. N. Boon and Mme. Boon; the Military Attache of the Swedish Legation, Capt. Karl Wessel, and Mme. Wessel, Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, Gen. Robert C. Richardson, Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, Mrs. Macfarlane Reid and the Vicomtesse de Burgoing, wife of the Naval Attache of the French Embassy.

Jackson Opposes Censorship

Attorney General Addresses Woman's National Democratic Club Luncheon

By Jesse Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson yesterday declared himself opposed to any measures of censorship or coercion that would restrict American liberties. Addressing the Woman's National Democratic Club, he declared he "would rather see the country settle the problem and come to a unity of purpose through free debate."

He asserted the country should not be driven in any standardized fashion to the support of the Administration.

"If anyone speaks of dictatorship all he has to do is look at the morning paper," he said, "to find the Administration critized as well as praised."

Explaining the functions of the Department of Justice, he said espionage is always with us "but there is no need for a spy in Washington because he could get all the information he wanted by reading the columnists in the papers. The processes of Government are carried on in broad daylight."

Industrial information is principally sought by spies, he said, such as that regarding new devices for sighting of bombs and formulae from which chemical products are brought forth. Because of these things, the FBI is constantly watching for spies all through the Government, he added.

In the field of sabotage, the Federal Government's field is narrow, he said, because it is often difficult to determine whether accidents are the result of action or sabotage.

Apprehension and prosecution of draft dodgers and the problem of dealing with conscientious objectors fall to the Department of Justice under the defense program, he added.

The department has also registered more than 5,000,000 aliens, he said, without an embarrassing incident. It now has a complete registration including an accurate inventory of the aliens and their military experience.

"This would make it possible, for instance, to ascertain within a few hours, if the information were needed, how many Japs were here who had had military service."

Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, of Florida, and president of the club, presided.

Among the luncheon guests were Solicitor General Francis Biddle, Assistant Attorney General Francis M. Shea and Mrs. Shea, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Norman M. Littell, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of an Assistant Attorney General; Mrs. Charles Fahy, wife of the Assistant Solicitor General; the director of the Bureau of Prisons, James V. Bennett, and Mrs. Bennett, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis and Mrs. Claude Hamilton.

Mrs. Charles Warren was in charge of the luncheon at which about 100 were present.

Even before the new headquarters of the Save the Children Committee opened at 1639 Connecticut Avenue, yesterday, contributions were coming in.

Sunday afternoon when Miss Quincy Smith, secretary, was hanging flags and posters in the room, a man stopped and looked them over and gave $30, which will sponsor one child in England for a year. Two similar donations were received Sunday and another immediately after the opening yesterday morning.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley is chairman of the local branch of the committee whose purpose is to collect such donations from sponsors. Some organizations have also given shelters, housing 50 children, and providing for their maintenance at the cost of $3,000.

Here, the owner of the building in which the local headquarters is located has donated use of the room, the utilities have been donated, the men who cleaned the room contributed their labor and the National Arts School has donated two weeks' time to make 25 dramatic posters describing the children's need.

Volunteers who will be at the room from 2 to 6 daily are Mrs. James Harnahan, Monday; Mrs. Lucy Kimberley, Tuesday; Mrs. George Bronson Rae, Wednesday; Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, Thursday; Mrs. Reider Claffy, Friday, and Girl Scouts from Friendship House, Saturday.

Mrs. C.H. Pierce Makes Report To Federation

The District Federation of Women's Clubs at its February meeting yesterday at Hotel 2400, authorized the education department to give active support to various items in the proposed 1942 school budget.

Mrs. Charles H. Pierce, vice chairman of the department, presented the report. The items for which support was approved include an appropriation of $12,?10 for teachers at the Americanization School; an appropriation of $304,600 for fuel, gas and electricity for the schools; $727,350 for repairs and improvements to school buildings and $30,000 for a new building for Wilson Teachers' College to replace the present one.

A resignation from the federation was presented and accepted from the woman's auxiliary to the National Osteopathic Association.

Mrs. Ernest William Howard introduced a resolution, which was passed, reaffirming the federation's stand for vigorous measures to suppress the growing of marihuana except where it is raised as a commercial crop for the hemp market.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the federation, presided at the meeting. Delegates elected to the triennial convention of the general federation to be held in Atlantic City in May were Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, Mrs. Charles Watkins, Mrs. John W. Frizzell and Mrs. Pierce Ashburn. The alternates included Mrs. Charles Langley, Mrs. Charles Keyser, Mrs. Lane and Mrs. Otto Hammerlund.

The program included a talk by Miss Elisabeth Poe, commandant of the National Service School for Girls during the World War, and Mrs. Charles Campbell Benedict, who was associated in the same work, both of whom told of the training of women for service in the emergency.

Gardeners Hear Mrs. W. R. Chapline

Mrs. W. Ridgely Chapline yesterday presented an illustrated talk on "American Beauty" at a luncheon meeting of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association at the Highlands. Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was guest of honor, and Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor also was a guest.

Democratic Women Hear Mrs. Tillett

Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, assistant chairman of the Democratic National Committee, last night addressed the Democratic Woman's National Council at its monthly meeting in the Willard Hotel.

"It is highly important," she said, "if the Democratic Party is to build a strong party organization, to support this Administration in carrying out its policies, that the party see to it that women have the right to participate in party organization in every State from the precinct to the National Committee. It is not so much a question of what is due women—it is a question of what is due the Democratic Party."

U. S. Seeks Ruling Against Hospitals

liam E. Leahy, of defense counsel.

'In the Government's mind," he continued, "there is pity for them, not heat. Pity for putting themselves in the hands of the A. M. A. and medical politicians.

"Instead of being free agents, they became puppets of the defendants."

Earlier in the day the Government had completed the presentation to the jury of corespondence purporting to show that none of the 12 hospitals involved had extended courtesy privileges to staff physicians of the Federal workers' medical cooperative.

The institutions in question are as follows: Emergency, Children's, Columbia, Casualty, Episcopal, Garfield, Georgetown, George Washington, Homeopathic, Providence, Sibley and Washington Sanitarium.

Many, if not all, of the above admit G. H. A. staff men to practice at the present time. The Government's allegations against them concerns only the period covered by the indictment—all of 1937 and most of 1938.

Leahy and Seth W. Richardson, for the defense, took turns depreciating the Government's case against the hospitals in their impassioned pleas in behalf of the institutions' motives.

The testimony of any patients whom the prosecution might call to the stand is meaningless unless it has first been proved that the hospitals were in conspiracy with the defendants, Richardson argued, adding that there has been no such proof.

That Sibley Hospital refused to accept a check made out by Group Health Association, in payment for services given a member treated there by a non-G. H. A. physician, is no proof of conspiracy, he said.

Richardson emphasized that private hospitals had, and still have, a perfect right to select and reject applicants for their medical staffs, "and it cannot be shown that any G. H. A. doctors were turned down because of their affiliation."

Leahy argued that all the Government's evidence against the hospitals is circumstantial—"circumstances collected with great care."

He bitterly criticized the prosecution's charge of "stalling" on the part of the hospitals, in considering applications by G. H. A. staff doctors for courtesy privileges.

The Government exceeds itself, according to Leahy, in "putting down gentlemen like Gist Blair (former president of Emergency Hospital) as claptrap conspirators." It did not have the confidence to name the hospitals as defendants but saw fit to stigmatize them as conspirators, the defense counsel shouted to the court.

In the nearly three weeks that it has been presenting evidence, the prosecution has not even proved that the District Medical Society, or any of its members, even influenced the hospitals to keep G. H. A. doctors out, Leahy said.

He emphasized that Garfield Hospital did extend temporary privileges to Dr. Raymond E. Selders, who was the cooperative's surgeon. These were withdrawn in January, 1938, for a good reason, namely, that the legality of G. H. A. was in doubt and must be proved before Dr. Selders could be added to the courtesy staff, Leahy declared.

Grant W. Kelleher, who shares with Lewin the responsibility of carrying the Government's anti-trust case against the organized doctors, argued that a prima facie case of conspiracy has already been made against the defendants.

It has been shown, he contended, that through a "white list," which omitted the name of Group Health Association, and by miscellaneous regulatory measures, the District Medical Society restrained G. H. A.

What the Government now wishes an opportunity to prove, he went on, is that the hospitals and their officials—both lay and medical—were in conspiracy with the organized doctors to withhold courtesy privileges from G. H. A. physicians, that when G. H. A. patients were admitted to hospitals they could not be treated by the cooperative's staff doctors and, in the case of Sibley, a check issued by the "persecuted" group was refused.

"We plan to put on the stand former patients who were not allowed to have the doctors of their choice," said Kelleher. "It is absolutely essential that the jury hear the entire conversations which they had."

At the outset of yesterday's session, the fourteenth since the case opened February 5, Justice James M. Proctor rejected the prosecution's request that proceedings of the District Medical Society's expulsion trial against two members be admitted into evidence.

The expulsion hearing, held in 1938, invilved Dr. Mario Scandiffio and Dr. Allen E. Lee. The former is now medical director of G. H. A. and Dr. Lee, who resigned from G. H. A. before the trial ended, is in private practice. The society's charges against him for having joined the clinic's staff were dropped.

Only witness on the stand yesterday was William C. Kirkpatrick, second president of G. H. A. who was called by the Government chiefly for the purpose of identifying correspondence between the association and the hospitals in connection with the futile efforts to obtain courtesy privileges for Dr. Selders.

House Gets Bill Easing Profits Tax

increased business, now has risen to $800,000,000.

The amending legislation reported out concerns itself with changes in methods of computing the amount of income subject to the excess profits tax, rather than with the formulas for determining the amount of payment after determining the taxable income.

Following the Ways and Means Committee meeting, Treasury experts explained the proposed changes as follows:

1—A two-year carryover of credits against income subject to the excess profits tax, as against present permission for only a one-year carryover and that only to corporations with income of $25,000 or less.

2—Specific deductions for abnormal income in the four-year base period (1936-1939) used in computing the income above which the excess profits tax is applied. Certain specific deductions are listed in the present law. The modification would provide for general abnormal deductions both as to type of income and as to amount.

3—Abnormal income in the taxable year. Present law permits deductions for such income only on six specific types. The modifications would keep those types and also allow adjustments on account of any income considered abnormal with respect either to kind or amount.

4—The manner of computing the average earnings credit. At present a corporation has to average its income for the four-year base period. The alternative method would provide for averaging that for the first two years and the last two separately, taking the difference between the two averages, and adding it to the average for the last two-year period. The total would be the credit, except that it could not exceed the actual income for any single year in the four-year period. A corporation would use whichever of these two methods would yield the greatest credit.

5—Joint returns. Insurance companies other than life or mutual companies would be permitted to file joint returns with noninsurance companies with which they are affiliated.

6—Recapitalization of advertising and other good-will expenses claimed for the four-year base period. Although not so reported previously, these could be charged to capital accounts, provided the taxpayer then paid regular back income taxes plus penalties and interest on previous income affected by the recapitalization.

7—Revision of income categories affecting the excess profits tax base in years now subject to statute of limitations. Despite what may have been previously reported in income tax returns, the excess profits taxpayers could, under this modification, report his true income for such years provided he paid back taxes plus penalties and interest.

8—Revision of the general relief section of the present excess profits law to permit corporations with abnormally low incomes in one or more of the base years to adjust their base period credit figure upward. No corporation could seek such an adjustment, however, unless it paid an excess profits tax equal to at least 6 per cent of its "normal tax net income." Also the tax saving to be effected would have to amount to at laest 10 per cent of the tax payment figured without benefit of the adjustment.

Miss Winslow Addresses Club

Women's organizations in South America are so much like those of the United States that a member of the League of Women Voters or the Trade Union League would feel perfectly at home at one of their meetings except for the language.

This statement was made by Miss Mary E. Winslow, United States representative on the Inter-American Commission of Women, last night in an address before the local Business and Professional Women's Clubs. She spoke on cooperation between women of the Americas.

The Latin-American women are facing problems which those of this country faced 25 or 30 years ago, she said, and are meeting them in much the same way, although in most cases they don't have political rights.

They are not now interested in working for suffrage, she said. Most of the women leaders in the various countries feel they can serve their nations best by working, side by side with the men, proving their ability to give patriotic service. Having thus made a place for themselves, they believe they will have a sound basis for their demands for political rights later, said Miss Winslow.

The dinner, held at the Admiral, was under the charge of Mrs. Marion Britt, who presided in place of Miss Earlene White, who is ill.

Judge Bentley At Hollins Fete

Judge Fay Bentley of the Juvenile Court was guest of honor and speaker last night at the annual Founder's Day banquet of the Hollins College Alumnae Association.

Judge Bentley, who was introduced by Miss Harriet Ann Jackson, alumnae president, emphasized the human side of the court. About 2,600 children passed through it last year, she said, and 2,000 adults, most of them in non-support cases which touched the lives of about 5,000 more children.

She explained the court's effort to prevent official court cases without detriment to the public or the individual. Judge Bentley said there is imperative need for a larger staff to help make more such home adjustments possible.

Joint Hearing To Be Sought On D. C. Bill

Joint Senate-House hearings on the Overton fiscal formula will be proposed today by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, when his fiscal affairs subcommittee meets to consider the Commissioners' amendments to the District income tax.

"I think we might get the bill through the House if the members can see that it will put an end to the annual squabble over the lump sum payment," Hunter said.

He believes time may be saved if his subcommittee and that of Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, take up the formula plan simultaneously. Both have introduced the bill in the respective chambers.

The House subcommittee will meet in executive session at 10 o'clock this mornnig to discuss the income tax amendments. District officials who drafted the legislation will testify. Invited guests will be representatives of the State tax divisions of Maryland and Virginia.

Hunter had invited Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, and Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, to attend the conference as the amendments might affect their constitutents. The members instead asked that the tax experts of their respective States be permited to attned.

Future course of the fiscal affairs subcommittee, Hunter said, will not be determined until after it is decided what disposition to make of the income tax amendments.

National U. Team Defeats Debaters Fro mBucknell

A National University debate team, upholding the negative side of the question: "Resolved That a Permanent Union Between the United States and the British Commonwealth Should be Effected Immediately," defeated a team from Bucknell University at the local school last night.

Murray Camarow and Charles Garlock, the national team, advanced the argument that such a union would be imperialistic. The Bucknell speakers, Richard Biddle and James Whyte, stressed the advantages of free trade in such a union.

The judges, who made a two-to-one decision, were Harold I. Baynton, of the Department of Justice; Harry L. Clendening, of the Department of the Interior; Joseph O. Janousek, author on foreign and international law. Professor Frank Smith, professor of public speaking at National University, presided.

Waller Heads Greater Capital Fund Drive

Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier of the Hamilton National Bank, and E. D. Merrill, president, Capital Transit Co., have been appointed chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Greater National Capital Committee's spring fund drive.

Edgar Morris, chairman of the committee, announced the appointments after an executive committee meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

Canvassing will begin May 1 and continue through May 31, it was announced.

The Greater National Capital Committee, part of the Board of Trade, has worked for the past 11 years to bring tourists and conventions to Washington. The number of convention visitors last year was estimated at 82,500.

"The visitor industry is a most important means of putting a large amount of outside money into circulation in this community," said Waller. "It is second only in importance to the money that comes from the Government pay rolls and it is essential that visitors' dollars be kept coming into the city."

Young Socialist Gets 2-Year Term For Avoiding Draft

New York, Feb. 24 (INS).—It took a Federal jury of eight men and four women exactly seven minutes today to decide that Stanley Rapperport, secretary of the Young People's Socialist League, was guilty of failing to register for the draft.

It took Judge Henry W. Goddard less time to sentence Rappeport to two years in jail, despite the prisoner's warning:

"I am afraid, your honor, that you and I will meet in the same concentration camp. When we do, I'll know that at least I tried to do something about it in advance."

Legion Official Predicts U. S. Will Enter 10-Year War

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 24 (AP).—John Thomas Taylor, legislative representative in Washington of the American Legion, today predicted in a speech before the Iowa Legislature that the present war "will last at least ten years and we will have millions of men in it before it is over."

He also declared that American merchantmen would be convoyed to England by the United States Navy some time after the lend-lease bill "has passed."

"It would be perfectly foolish," he continued, "for this country of ours to spend $1,300,000,000 to supply Great Britain with munitions of war and the like and then fail to see that they reach Great Britain."

Taylor also took issue with Secretary of the Navy Knox on the question of sending more destroyers to Great Britain.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

The Reed Committee on Civil Service Improvement yesterday, in addition to major suggestions, made a number of minor recommendations to President Roosevelt that definitely would improve administration of the merit system. It suggested, for example, that a committee of career engineers be established to determine policy and to keep the Civil Service Commission advised on all aspects of the selection of engineers. It recommended liberal application of the State quota law, expansion of the training system for Federal employes, a definite promotion system, and a study of the veterans' preference laws with a view to giving preference to persons who are now being drafted into the military services.

Civil Service examining methods were investigated by the committee and it strongly urged the commission "to cure the evil of delay in the establishment of registers. The committee further suggested that oral examinations be given for grade CAF-12, P-5 and higher.

Civil Service Commission also was advised to time junior professional and scientific annual exams around graduation time "so that the Government can get the best possible personnel available." The committee objected to seniority as a basis for promotion. "We believe," the committee report explained, "that the best basis of selection for promotion in the professional, scientific, and higher administrative positions lies in the record of service as observed and evaluated by supervisory officers and personnel officers."

The committee pointed out that higher-paid employes found it difficult to be transferred and it urged the Council of Personnel Administration to work up a plan that would facilitate transfers of professional, scientific and administrative personnel. The committee suggested that a "general manager" be appointed in each department and agency to supervise administrative employes. It also recommended that the duties of administrative employes should be outlined in detail.

One of the most interesting recommendations of the committee is as follows: "We believe that a small number of cases (Federal employes) involving personality problems require more effective psychological and psychiatric service, and recommend that such service be provided upon request of either the Civil Service Commission or the Public Health Service."

Congress was asked to liberalize the retirement act. The committee suggested, briefly: Optional retirement at 60 after 15 years' service, compulsory retirement at 70 after 15 years' service; the annuity of any employe who has served 40 or more years shall not be less than half of his highest average annual salary received during any five consecutive years of service, that the employe contribution be raised from 3½ to 4½ per cent and that employes whose annual rate of pay is more than $3,120 make additional contributions varying with rate of pay but not exceeding 5.19 per cent.

Richard W. Bunch will be appointed director of personnel at National Youth Administration on March 15. He will replace George Gant who is on leave from TVA. Bunch was former director of the Indiana State Bureau of Personnel and he is a friend of Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt . . . Civil Service Commission has announced an exam for assistant fire chief at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Navy Department soon may be compelled to place several hundreds of its employes on night shifts. It has reached the space saturation point and hundreds of new employes are still needed. It is hiring new employes at the rate of between 300 and 400 a month. Additional supervisors for the night shifts will be trained, as none is available.

Civil Service registers and the number of eligibles on each: Chief statistical draftsman, 20; principal statistical draftsman, 40; senior statistical draftsman, 84; statistical draftsman, 179, and assistant statistical draftsman, 231.

National Symphony Orchestra collaborates with the Original Ballet Russes in Constitution Hall Monday night. Program: Les Sylphides (music by Chopin), Paganini (music by Rakhmaninov), Graduation Ball (music by Johann Strauss 2d). Conductor: Antal Dorati.

Having joined forces for several seasons with the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo, the National Symphony Orchestra showed its impartiality last evening by collaborating with Col. W. de Basil's Original Ballets Russes in Constitution Hall to the delight of a large and demonstrative audience - spectience. A new word is really needed for an assemblage of people whose eyes are as active as their ears while witnessing the choreographic art—that indissoluble marriage between music and mimetic movement.

BROWN

Last night's entertainment began with Mikhail Fokin's "Les Sylphides," which preserves the traditional ballet at the height of its stylized perfection. Beyond that point the routine of steps and elevations could not go without breaking the pattern, and no better music than that of Chopin can be associated with the poetic grace of this romantic illusion. Tamara Tumanova and Tatyana Ryabushinska, the thistledown ballerinas, were welcomed back in this lovely spectacle, and their principal associates were Anna Volkova and Pavel Petrov.

What happened to the traditional ballet when it encountered the disruptive force of new choreographic ideas was exemplified in "Paganini," a fantasy set forth to the measures of Rakhmaninov's rhapsody for piano and orchestra on a theme by Paganini. According to the program the composer had a hand with Fokin in devising the scenario, and one wonders just how much credit should go to him for the vivid impression of the great violin virtuoso. There is evidence that the authorities have been studied to make the central figure appear to us as he did to his contemporaries. The opening scene almost reproduced to our vision Heine's description:

"A somber figure, which seemed to have risen from the dark regions, appeared on the stage. It was Paganini in full evening dress. His black coat and vest were of some such horrible cut as infernal etiquette prescribes at the court of Proserpine. The black pantaloons flapped about his legs most wildly. His long arms seemed still longer when he made his strange obeisance to the audience, and bent so far forward that the bow in one hand and the violin in the other almost touched the floor. There was something so terribly wooden and so foolishly animal in the angular bendings of his body that his bowing produced a great desire to laugh. But his pale face, rendered still more deathlike by the glaring lights of the orchestra, seemed so supplicating and so full of shy timidity that shuddering compassion suppressed the desire."

The ballet expresses in symbolic scenes the daemonic quality of Paganini and the effects which that quality had in arousing all kinds of tales about him from the supernatural to the scandalous. The choreography is at times a little confused but Dmitri Rostov carried through the part of the protagonist with a macabre intensity.

"Graduation Ball" ended the program with gayety and laughter. The plot is the thin one of a visit of military cadets to a fashionable girls' school, with the inevitable introduction of divertissements. But the proceedings are enlivening and exhilarating from the caricatural antics of Borislav Rumanin and Dmitri Rostov as the head mistress and the old general.

Newsmen a Bit More Erudite Than Women Colleagues in Quiz

Washington newspapermen proved themselves to be 15 points nearer to omniscience than their feminine colleagues last night by airing their erudition on such questions as:

"What President of the United States never kissed his wife goodnight?" "What's a gusset?" And "What's a guimpe?"

The gentlemen and ladies of the press exhibited their profundity in a "quiz to end all quizzes" at the National Press Club, and the gentlemen's team came out on top, 120 to 105.

"President James Buchanan never kissed his wife goodnight," answered Lorenzo Martin, Louisville Times correspondent. "He didn't have one."

Martin, no lightweight, also provided this definition for a gusset: "It's a thing that a lady, if she were my size, would begin to put into her clothes."

Both of Martin's answers were ruled correct, but the definition of a guimpe, given by Frank Waldrop, of the Washington Times-Herald, was ruled out.

"It's a place where Boy Scouts go in the summer," said Waldrop.

The guimpe question reverted to the women's team, and Frances Parkinson Keyes, Washington authoress, was quick to bring in the answer.

"I wore them myself when I was a little girl," she said. A guimpe, she explained, is a little girl's garment with long sleeves and high neck, worn under a dress to hide long-sleeved flannel underwear.

Mrs. Keyes proved herself to be a walking encyclopedia, going so far in one instance as to refut successfully the quizzer's answer to a question on the relationship between Theodore Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.

The quizzer thought they were fifth cousins once removed, but Mrs. Keyes explained he was reckoning the relationship through Franklin's father instead of his mother. Mrs. Roosevelt and Theodore Roosevelt are first cousins, she explained, making Franklin, jr. a first cousin once removed.

When the men fell down on defining culinary terms such as baste, cream, scald and saute, Mrs. Keyes gave an exposition on old-fashioned cooking.

"I am one of the few women living," she commented on her knowledge of early-day cooking, "who doesn't mind telling her age or her weight."

The women's team provided a new recipe for cocktails in answering a question on what Japanese commodity ranks second in United States imports. The quizzer said silk was first and hinted that the No. 2 commodity was used as a base for cocktails.

"I'd say tung oil," was the reply of Mary Hornaday, of the Christian Science Monitor. The correct answer was crabmeat.

Miss Hornaday was prompt, too, with her answer to the question: "A small little goat sat down on a cactus plant without perturbation. What group of Hollywood players does that remind you of?"

"The Dead End Kids," was her reply, and that was right.

Questions were fired to the men's team by Genoa Herrick, captain of the women's team. The men's captain, Ted Wilcox, of the Philadelphia Bulletin, asked questions of the women.

Judges were Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire; Senator Burton, of Ohio, and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint.

Compilers of the questions were George Stimpson and Homer Dodge, professional question - and - answer experts.

But one poser which they did not compile was:

"Will the gentleman from Missouri whose car is parked in the alley please step backstage? There's a bevy of policemen here."

There was no answer.

Several More Parties Today To Swell Blood-Bank Funds

Several more festivities today will swell funds for the blood bank at Children's Hospital.

Four hundred persons are expected at a card party to be given tonight by Washington Gas Light Co. Post, No. 44, American Legion, Robert H. Lewis, a member of the committee, said.

The display floor of the company at 411 Tenth Street Northwest will be turned over to the party. All proceeds from ticket sales will go into the blood bank fund, for a separate fund has been raised for the purchase of prizes. Attendance at the party is largely an employe effort, posters having been placed in the various departments to encourage a large representation from each.

J. Thomas Onley is chairman of the committee for the party, with other active workers including George E. Evanshaw, commander of the post; James E. West, B. K. Slaughter, Walter S. Smith, Walter Cusick, James Johnson.

Another benefit event today will be the card party of Ladies of Charity of St. Paul's Parish at 2 p. m. at Fifteenth and V Streets Northwest.

At Colonial Village in Arlington County last night, 16 tables of bridge players participated in a party under direction of J. T. Onley. A second Colonial Village Blood Bank affair, a dance, will be held there Friday night.

A new party, planned for March 22 by the Twenty-ninth Division Association, was announced yesterday by its commander, Milton E. Groome. It will be a dance at the New Colonial Hotel. The committee making arrangements includes J. Fred Chase, Edward V. Dittoe and Frank J. Lupac.

Police Boys Club Drive Workers To Report Today

The Rev. John Keating Cartwright, of Immaculate Conception Church, will address the workers. Reports will be made by these leaders:

David S. Bethune, Col. E. Goring Bliss, John Waters, John Dodge, J. H. Ferry, Milton S. Kronheim, H. C. Mitchell, S. E. Mooers, Burton Langhenry, John H. Reilly, C. G. Pennington and Harry Karr.

Merger Plan For Courts Is Opposed

Mid-City Citizens See Complications If Consolidation Is Carried Out

Opposition to the proposed merger of the District's Municipal and Police Courts, advocated in a bill now before Congress, was voiced last night by the Mid-City Citizens Association.

The citizens, meeting in Thomson School, pointed out that such a merger would further complicate handling of traffic and other local cases.

The association also supported the Overton resolution, pending before Congress, which would increase the Federal appropriation to the District to the proportion of District property used by Federal buildings.

Members further urged that the Abbot Vocational School be moved to the site of the old Tuberculosis Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest, recommended that Capt. Jere Sullivan of No. 2 Precinct be promoted to police inspector, and opposed the razing of the Pension Office at Fifth and G Streets Northwest.

Cooperation with the Connecticut Avenue Businessmen's Association was planned to drive for a return of the bus route between I and Twentieth Streets to Connecticut Avenue.

The citizens presented A. J. Driscoll, president, with a silver service set for his 2-month-old granddaughter, Joyce H. Andrews, of 4601 Brandywine Street Northwest.

Georgetown

Opposition to local self-government and advocacy of national representation for the District were expressed in a resolution adopted unanimously by Georgetown Citizens Association last night.

The matter was presented by the executive committee in a letter by B. H. Meyer, president of the association.

The association favored an amendment specifying what form of suffrage should be granted to the District, rather than merely authorization of Congress to decide.

The association directed its traffic committee to appear before the Congressional committee to oppose the proposed closing of Virginia Avenue at Eighteenth Street Northwest to permit an extension of the Pan American Union.

J. B. Wyckoff, chairman of the traffic committee, reported proposals to make Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Streets Northwest one-way streets and the association took under advisement the question of whether to approve or protest. The meeting was held in St. John's Parish Hall.

North Capitol

The North Capitol Citizens Association last night urged that traffic policemen be released from "their innumerable duties not connected with traffic control," such as checking addresses for the Department of Vehicles, and that these duties be assigned to other departments.

The resolution, suggested by a traffic report prepared by Baxter Smith's federation committee and read by James Crooks, pointed to the need for more traffic police and urged a thorough examination of the "irrelevant" duties now performed.

Members of the association also heard a report on the status of the crosstown bus controversy and asked that the Commissioners have the Klingle Road Bridge over Rock Creek enlarged so that it could be used as a crosstown route.

Ten new members were admitted.

Pugh Bible Class' 35th Anniversary Hailed by 150

Nearly 150 persons last night attended the thirty-fifth anniversary banquet of the A. B. Pugh Bible Class of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church in the church educational building on K Street Northwest.

Rep. Fritz Lanham, of Texas, told the group "the trouble with the world today is that it has forgotten God."

He was introduced by Justice Bolitha J. Laws, teacher of the class. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Church, spoke briefly.

Also taking part in the program were Dr. C. P. Clark, superintendent of the church school; the Rev. Wilber Wilson, associate pastor, and the Rev. Purcell Story.

Missionaries Tell of Bomb Blowing Ship Cabin to Bits

MR. AND MRS. W. H. BORLASE

Two young missionaries from Nigeria arrived in Washington last night with the story of their narrow escape from a German bombed ship, but they smilingly added that they had never doubted but that they would come through safely.

The Rev. and Mrs. W. Howard Borlase, seated comfortably on a sofa at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip L. Greene at Woodley Park Towers, pieced together the dramatic story of their rescue.

They were aboard a British ship on their way home for a year's furlough when the vessel was bombed off the north of Ireland.

"We were in a friend's cabin, holding the prayer meeting that we held there every morning," Mr. Borlase said.

"On this particular morning we had overstayed our usual time there. Suddenly we heard several explosions that made the ship quiver. Then with a crash we were jolted from our places and everything was plunged into darkness.

"We seized our life belts and groped our way out of the cabin. We were told to take to the lifeboats, so we made our way to where our boat station should have been.

"I say 'should have' because the place was then non-existent. We found, instead, a great gaping cavern.

"I had intended to try to return to our cabin to save the 600 feet of movie film, showing scenes of our work in Africa. Then I discovered that our cabin had been blown to atoms."

"Don't forget about the Scripture," Mrs. Borlase reminded. "Just before we left Nigeria, we had read the passage in Isaiah 43, where it says: 'When thou passeth through the waters, I will be with thee.'"

Then Mr. Borlase took up the story. They found room in another lifeboat, and with the "tremendous swell running," it was perilous business to take off in the boat. They were traveling in a convoy, and about an hour later a freighter picked them up.

"We watched the ship that had been our home for almost a month break in two, and slowly sink," Mr. Borlase said. "Some 35 persons, I am told, perished with it."

It was three days before the freighter put in at a town on the west coast of Scotland. In the meantime "we knew that submarines were around, and we often felt the 'whump' of depth charges going off," he added.

"Do you know what you miss most, when you have lost all your baggage, as we did?" Mr. Borlase asked. "A toothbrush."

"So we packed an emergency kit, complete with two toothbrushes. And on our crossing to the United States, we kept that kit beside us all the time."

Leaving the British Isles on January 23, the Borlases crossed on the Georgic, landing in New York two weeks ago. The Borlases, both under 30, formerly lived in Canada. They were missionaries in Nigeria, British West Indies, only a short time when they were married there in 1937. They are with the Sudan Interior Mission, an interdenominational enterprise.

"Ours was the first Christian church in a parish of 600,000 people," Mr. Borlase said. "Our first building was a church with a grass roof and walls of cornstalks. The whole building cost 25 shillings. But now we have a better building—a mud church—completed just before we left."

They have engagements to address numerous church groups here during the remainder of this week.

Suitland Fire Destroys Home And Grocery

Flames which leaped 50 feet in the air late yesterday swept through the Suitland, Md., home and grocery store of C. Norris Hartman, causing an estimated $25,000 damage, and jamming rush hour traffic for half a mile.

One fireman was cut on the hand while laying hose to combat the hour-long blaze. He was James Butler, 27, of 9 Central Avenue, Cottage City, Md.

In the store with Hartman when the fire started were three clerks, F. C. Nowe, 3206 Volta Place Northwest; Robert Briton, 3244 Q Street Northwest, and Allu Butler, of Suitland. All fled to safety.

Butler, a Treasury Department employe on vacation, went to the fire with the Cottage City truck. He suffered a cut hand, and received first-aid treatment at the scene.

Milkman Loses $200 To Robbers

Restaurant Burglary Near Headquarters, Two Other Holdups Keep Police Busy

The "paper bag bandit" struck again, a milkman was robbed of between $200 and $300, and a restaurant near police headquarters was broken into for the fourteenth time in crimes committed yesterday in Washington.

A white man, known to police as the "paper bag bandit" because he always enters the premises of his victims with a revolver concealed in a paper sack, held up a High's Ice Cream store at 609 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast shortly after 11 a. m. and obtained between $20 and $25.

Mrs. Florence M. Burfoot, 37, of 612 South Carolina Avenue Southeast, the store clerk, told police the man ordered her "to go in the back room and walk fast." When she returned both he and contents of the cash register were gone, she said. It was the second time in less than four months that the store has been held up.

Elmer Pate, 48, of 203 South Fillmore Street, Arlington, a driver for Chestnut Farms Dairy, was robbed by two colored men at Eleventh and P Streets Northwest.

The Courthouse Coffee Shop, located at 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest, in a building adjoining Police Headquarters, has again played host to an unwanted guest—for the fourteenth time in the past five years.

Two young gunmen, believed to be members of a gang of five bandits who have carried out a series of holdups here during the past month, last night entered a laundry store at 4918 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest and left with $15. The victim was Miss Monta Bahre, 27, of Silver Spring, a clerk.

Sometime between Saturday afternoon and yesterday morning an intruder gained entrance by breaking a kitchen window. Missing items this time include: One ham and a dozen eggs, 12 bottles of ginger ale, one roast of beef and a quart of cream.

In the slaying of Mrs. Fannie Cohen, shot to death in her U Street dress shop on Saturday, February 15, police last night were still attempting to apprehend a colored man whom they believed to be the slayer. Chief of Detectives Barnard Thompson earlier yesterday disclosed that a suspect arrested Sunday night had been released after proving his innocence.

Injured Eagles' Stars Will Face Orioles

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 24.—Unless the big league club owners have been completely numbed by the impact of Judge Landis' previous crack-downs, it is inconceivable that they will not raise some sort of a howl at his latest decree.

POVICH

In a brief bulletin sent to all club owners, Landis has announced that in the future all players bought from the minor leagues must be retained or exposed to the waiver list before they can be sent back to the minors. Boiled down, Landis' ukase strikes at the very foundation of the vast baseball empires of the owners.

If it sticks it may mean that the big league teams will probably have to dispose of their extensive minor league holdings, because Landis has made the risk of losing young players too great for the investment. It means that any big league team with a likely looking rookie on a farm club can have only one crack at him when they bring him up to the majors.

For example, consider the case of Phil Rizzuto, the rookie shortstop the Yankees brought up from their Kansas City farm. On the open market Rizzuto would probably bring between $50,000 and $100,000. The Yankees merely took money from one pocket and put it in another when they bought Rizzuto from Kansas City, but he is still classed as a "purchased" player. Until Landis' latest rule the Yankees could send him back to the minor leagues for three years and recall him three times if he didn't make good at the first asking.

But since the Landis crack-down the Yankees must keep Rizzuto with their club, even if he is not ready for the big leagues, or lose title to him. If he were placed on the waiver list he would be grabbed at the $7,500 waiver price by scavenger clubs lying in wait for such bargains and willing to carry the player. The scavenger club would have borne none of the expense of developing Rizzuto during the four years he was in the minors.

Under such circumstances, the Yankees and other clubs with extensive minor league holdings couldn't stand the gaff and would be forced to get out of minor league baseball. That, of course, is what the judge wants, because he never did like the chain store system. Landis always considered it to the best interests of baseball that minor league teams be home-owned rather than controlled by big league club financing.

What Landis has done has been to put the so-called "purchased" player, who is usually nothing more than a farm hand, in the same class as the "drafted" player. No player drafted by a big league club from the minors can be sent to a farm team until other big league clubs have had a chance to buy him at the waiver price, and Landis has extended that order to include mere farm hands called up to the majors.

Landis has never made any bones about hating the chain store system of baseball. He has stated it was getting out of hand, but in the past he could find no way to curb it. His latest ruling is his coup de grace. He's going to make the chain store so unhealthy and unprofitable for the big league clubs that they'll have to get out of the business.

One of the reasons Landis never liked the farm system was because it gave a big league club too long control over a player. Take the case of a team owning a likely looking rookie. Actually it could keep title to him for seven years without bringing him up to the majors. The team was allowed to keep him in a Double A league for four years before he would be subject to draft. Then, just before he was subject to draft, they'd "buy" him, and thus were able to keep him in the minors for three more years as an optioned player.

Landis' point is that this sort of maneuvering retards the advancement of a player in his chosen profession, pointing out that whereas a team like the Yankees may have no immediate room for Rizzuto, he could be playing a regular shortstop job with another team in the majors and drawing a big league salary. It is another manifestation of Landis' friendship for the players, who pay none of the $65,000 salary he draws as baseball commissioner.

The club owners are not so sure that Landis' ruling will have a healthy effect on minor baseball. In fact, they take the opposite view. one club owner summed it up rather logically to this department this way:

"Minor league baseball has showed that it can't get along without major league help. The teams that are not directly controlled by big league clubs are able to get by only because of the money received from selling players to the big league teams. Those sales are going to drop off, way off.

"We used to be willing to pay $20,000, $30,000 and as high as $50,000 for a minor league rookie, but we can't put out any such prices under the new state of affairs. We can't afford to pay that sort of money with the rookie having only one shot at making good. We used to be able to buy him and send him out for more experience if necessary, but that's out now. Who wants to pay, say, $30,000 for a rookie under those conditions, and then have to let him go to some other club at the $7,500 waiver price if he doesn't make good right away? The minors are going to be cut off from their life blood unless we can convince Landis to change his ruling."

Len Burrage, Knipfel Back In Line-up

Washington Hockey Team Could Regain League Lead With Victory Tonight

By Jack Munhall.

Len Burrage and Ross Knipfel, Washington's first-line defense duo, are expected to see action, despite bothersome injuries, tonight when the Eagles seek for the third time in a week to displace the Baltimore Orioles atop the Eastern Amateur Hockey League.

Chances for a new all-time record crowd for the latest meeting of the Eagles and the Orioles are excellent, it was reported last night, and at least 4,000 paying patrons are expected to be on hand at 8:30 at Riverside Stadium.

Burrage, mainstay of the Washington defense, who missed last Tuesday's match with River Vale because of a broken toe, and Knipfel, who received a badly swollen hand in that game, both were at practice yesterday. Afterward Trainer Ian Munro declared that Knipfel was almost certain to be able to play near his usual quota, and that Burrage would at least be in there long enough to test his injured toe.

Eagles Need Victory

All of which is welcome news to the Eagles as they prepare to once more knock the Orioles loose from their one-point grip on the league lead. Having defeated the Orioles, 5-1, recently to snap a long losing streak, the Eagles need another victory tonight to tie up their season's series with the defending champions who have won five and tied one of ten previous meetings with Redvers Mackenzie's team.

With Knipfel and Burrage on the doubtful side, Coach Mackenzie indicated last night that he would start his second-string defense combination of Jim McCurry and Walter Scherer, the newcomer from Nova Scotia. Scherer, a 24-year-old, 202-pound husky, who hails from Sydney, of the Colliery League, one of the fastest amateur circuits in or around Canada, will bear close scrutiny tonight. Off his performance against the Orioles, who are Washington's chief rivals for the championship, it may be judged just how much worth this German-American youth will prove to the Eagles.

Game Is Test

The Orioles, with fleet wingmen such as Ned Vitarelli, Carl Ripley and Jack Riley, are a real test for and defenseman, and if Scherer can stop them as effectively as he took care of River Vale's Skeeters Friday, he probably will get Mackenzie's stamp of approval.

An interesting sidelight to the match will be the first face-to-face meeting of Washington's Hal Dewey and Baltimore's Guy Roach since their memorable fight here when the Baltimore bully sustained a six-stitch cut. The teams clashed in Baltimore the following night and Roach missed the match because of his suspension for striking Referee Mel Harwood. He was there, however, and repeated the threat he had made here to Dewey that he would give the Washington player two stitches for everyone he received.

Also highlighting the match will be Norm Burns efforts to smash the league goal scoring record which he tied Friday against River Vale. With the aid of his crack wingmen assistants, Frank Mailley and Jack MacBeth, the big center expects to chalk up his fifty-fourth goal and erase the record of 54 held jointly by Norm Calladine and Herb Foster.

1,400 See District Contender Knock Philadelphian Into Ropes in 9th Round

By Al Hailey

Phil Furr won himself one more battle with Father Time last night at Turner's Arena by going to the post an 8-to-5 underdog and fighting his way uphill to a ten-round draw with a younger and more active opponent from Philadelphia, Gene Buffalo.

The 30-year-old former plasterer, staking his all on a knockout, threw caution to the winds and almost paid for it by being shunted back into preliminary assignments, but he put on a stirring rally in the ninth and tenth rounds and managed to win an even break by the skin of his teeth.

While a crowd of 1,400 fans looked on in amazement, Phil came back with a rush at the opening of the ninth round and nailed the colored welterweight with a smashing right hand, flush on the jaw that sent Buffalo flying into the ropes and almost out.

Fails In Pinch

But Philbert was wild. His timing was had and his wind was short. He tore after the jittery bug from the Quaker City swinging from all angles but he could not land a solid blow.

The fight was not actually decided until the tenth round, and Phil's comeback proved that he still has a little something left when the chips are down. When the final session came around, Phil had won three rounds and Buffalo four, on The Post score sheet, and Phil needed the tenth to earn a draw and a possible return fight.

Throwing more right hands than he has tossed in a fight in the last year, Phil appeared to be fighting for a lost cause after the second round, when he stood toe to toe with Buffalo and slugged it out in a wild exhibition, faintly reminiscent of a barroom brawl.

But he came back with renewed vigor in the ninth, ran across the ring right into Gene's outstretched left with his chin but kept boring in until he caught the Philadelphian with a smashing right. He followed up with a left hook to the stomach and Gene winced with pain and retreated at full speed.

The customers paid out $1,405 to see the business. Phil, appearing slightly overweight, weighed in at 151½ and Buffalo checked in at 148.

Heavyweight Boxer Dies After Kayo

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Arne Anderson, veteran Minneapolis heavyweight, died tonight in the ring without regaining consciousness after being knocked out by Lou Thomas, of Indianapolis, in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-rounder.

Dr. Frank Lagorio, physician for the Illinois State Boxing Commission, pronounced Anderson dead at 11:45 (Central standard time) after an inhalator crew had worked over the fighter for more than 45 minutes.

The fight was fairly close but not unusually rough prior to Thomas' knockout punch, a right hook which flattened Anderson near one corner of the ring. The big Swede's head struck the floor sharply and he never moved.

As soon as the 10-count was completed Dr. Lagorio jumped into the ring and began examining Anderson. Shortly afterward firemen were summoned with an inhalator.

The heavyweight, who weighed 189½ for the fatal bout, was never moved from the ring for fear of injuring him further.

Chairman Joe Triner of the State boxing commission and president of the National Boxing Association was present and was deputized as deputy coroner. An inquest was called for 9:30 a. m. Tuesday.

The referee was Walter Rightmore, who often officiates at Marigold Gardens, neighborhood fight center where Anderson and Thomas met in the main event before a crowd of 1,233.

Triner said afterwards that he did not see Thomas strike a blow immediately before the fighter fell to the canvas, but the Indianapolis puncher said he connected with a right to the chin which traveled about 4 inches.

Thomas, who outweighed Anderson by 23 pounds, had had a little the best of the battle in the fifth and sixth rounds battering the Swede with strong body blows.

Anderson, the favorite in the betting, had been fighting for several years. Among his opponents were Johnny Paychek, Lee Savold, Charles Retzlaff and Carl Vinciquerra.

Travis to Be Highest Paid Nat, Griff Says

Georgian 'Practically Agreed' to Terms Which Will Give Him $14,000 in 1941

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 24.—Cecil Travis has "practically agreed" to salary terms that will make him the highest-paid player on the Washington club.

From his Riverdale, Ga., home, the lanky shortstop has been duelling with Owner Clark Griffith for the past six weeks on the subject of his 1941 salary, and Griffith indicated today that they had reached agreement.

The Nats' owner admitted that Travis deserved a salary increase and there is little doubt that the drawling Georgian now succeeds Dutch Leonard as the top-salaried man on the club. Last season, Leonard was drawing $15,000 but this spring, according to Griffith, he took a cut of "a thousand or so." Travis, who was drawing $13,000 in 1940, received a pay boost of at least $1,000.

Travis is not scheduled to report to the Nats' camp until March 1. His departure from the holdout ranks leaves Catcher Rick Farrell and Infielder Buddy Myer as the only unsigned veterans. Ferrell is scorning the same pay he received last season, and Myer is balking at what he considers too deep a salary cut.

Back at Shortstop

When he comes to the Nats' camp Travis will find himself back at the shortstop job he thought he had put behind him forever. Last spring he cheerfully gave up the position to Jimmy Pofahl and moved to third base, which was more to his liking, but Pofahl's failure to make good jerked Travis back to shortstop.

Travis was the Nats' leading hitter last season, with a .322 average. He maintained better than a .300 average from the opening day of the season and for several months hovered around the league batting lead. He is beginning his seventh season with the Nats, during which time he has failed to hit .300 only once.

Rookie Pofahl, who cost Griffith $20,000 in cash and the equivalent of $20,000 in players when he was bought from Minneapolis a year ago, is something of a problem child to the Nats' bosses. They like his fielding well enough and they are tolerant of his throwing arm, but they are highly dissatisfied with his hitting. The power of the Nats is such that Manager Bucky Harris shudders at the thought of carrying a weak-hitting shortstop in addition to his semipunchless infield.

Still in the Dark

The Nats have been in camp for most of a week, but as yet they haven't set foot on the diamond. All their workouts have been held on the edges of the field while a ground crew has been hustling to put the infield in condition. Tomorrow, for the first time, a pitcher will set foot on the rubber.

Harris confesses that he knows no more about his rookie pitching crop now than when they first climbed into uniform five days ago. "All I could go by is their action," said Harris. "I haven't seen them try to put anything on the ball. It will be another week before they show me anything."

Scout Joe Cambria is in camp, touting all the rookies he sent up to the team and looking down his nose at any players who came from other sources . . . Cambria says Bill Kennedy, Joe Cleary, Joe Poydock, Louis Thuman, Alex Zukowski and Bill Zinser can't miss . . . But Bucky Harris is sort of reluctant to take his word for it, and will still string along with such as Ken Chase, Sid Hudson and Dutch Leonard . . . The three rookie catchers in camp are dizzy from trying to catch the towering pop fouls that Coach Bennie Bengough lifts to them every day as the final phase of their workout . . . Best pop foul catcher among 'em is Dick Hahn, the merest rookie of them all . . . Dutch Leonard lost three pounds today, despite the absence of the sun at Tinker Field. . . . Most of the rookies, who haven't had a payday since last September, and won't have another one until the last of April, already have drawn salary advances from the Washington club or its farm teams.

V.P.I. Closes Season With Loss to G. W.

By the Associated Press

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 24.—George Washington's rangy basketball team rolled over Virginia Tech, 54 to 37, here tonight as the Gobblers ended their season before a sparse crowd. It was G. W.'s seventeenth triumph as against three defeats.

The fast-passing, fast-breaking Colonials proved themselves superior in every department, outshooting and out-passing the hard-trying Techmen.

Once George Washington got out in front, Tech never threatened. A brief rally midway of the second half brought V. P. I. within ten points of the flying George Washington team but otherwise the boys from Washington, new members of the Southern Conference, won about as they pleased.

Joe Comer, with 14 points, and Matt Zunic, with 11, led the Colonials, while Julius Rubin made 13 for the Techmen.

The summary showed that the Colonials got only four more shots from the floor than the Gobblers. G. W. had 68 chances to 64 for the Gobblers but made 23 while Tech could hit only 14.

The Colonials awaited good opportunities to shoot, attempting only a few long range shots and then only when they were wide open. Passing well and breaking precisely, the boys from Washington scored a good percentage of their shots on lay-ups while Tech was forced to fire from long range.

On the other hand, the Gobblers were forced to fire almost all together from long range.

Bill Farnsworth Wins $1,000 Purse

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 24 (AP).—Tall Trees Stables' Bill Farnsworth splashed around a muddy track today to capture the $1,000 Mayor Leo McLaughlin Handicap, featured event on the initial program of Oaklawn Park's 30-day racing season.

The 8-year-old bay gelding, with McCalvert up, finished a length and a half ahead of J. Schmidt's True Star. Mrs. Emil Denemark's Blind Eagle was third. Bill Farnsworth covered the 6-furlong route in 1:14 2/5 to pay $10.60, $6.20 and $4.30.

Despite snow flurries this morning and threatening skies during the afternoon, an estimated 7,500 persons witnessed the 1941 inaugural.

Favorites Lose In Florida 4-Ball Play

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 24.—The well-regarded team of Charley Whitehead, South River, N. J., and Frank Allan, Pittston, Pa., was upset by a pair of Floridians today in the opening round of the Miami Biltmore Amateur Four-Ball Golf Tournament.

Willima Y. Stembler, of Miami, and George Edmondson, of Tampa, scored a one-up victory over Whitehead and Allan, 1938 tournament winners and co-medalists this year.

Dick Chapman, national amateur champion, and George Dawson, of Chicago, were the day's scoring sensations. They carded a best ball 31, four under par, on the first nine during an 8 and 6 victory over E. G. Livesay, of Coral Gables, and Robert Lowry, of Eatontown, N. J.

Turnesa Beaten

Earl Christiansen and Harvey Draughon, Miami policemen who won last year, defeated Don Allan, of Pittston, and Mel Demarais, of Portsmouth, N. H., 6 and 4.

Frank Strafaci and Jerry Cauza, both of Brooklyn, eliminated Willie Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., and Walter Mullady, Chicago, 2 and 1.

Arnold Minkley, Chicago, and Bill Reed, Indianapolis, defeated Mike Dietz, Detroit, and Dr. Leslie J. Barnette, Coral Gables, 5 and 3.

Charles Levy and D. K. Olin, of Chicago, ousted Denny Liegerot, Miami, and Andy Agaites, Dayton, Ohio, 1 up in 19 holes.

Harold Butler, Garden City, N. Y., and Ralph Stevens, Miami, beat Bob Ludwig and George Coleman, both of Miami, 1 up in 19 holes.

More Than 250 Nearby Athletes In A.A.U. Meet

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 24.—Thirty-three colleges, high schools and athletic clubs of Maryland and the District of Columbia entered more than 250 runners and field men today in the invitation A. A. U. and interscholastic track meet to be held in the Fifth Regiment Armory here Saturday night.

The largest number—approximately 150—were from 20 high schools in Washington, Baltimore County, the Eastern Shore, and Baltimore City, said Fred Crosby, South Atlantic Amateur Athletic Union secretary.

Navy Enters 22

Navy, with 22 athletes, headed the A. A. U. (college and club) division, followed by the University of Maryland, Western Maryland, Catholic University, St. Joseph's College of Philadelphia, Johns Hopkins, Catton Track Club, Stonewall Democratic Club, Cross Country Club, Forest Park Athletic Club, Port Howard, Baltimore Marathon Club and St. James Boys Home.

Crosby said two team trophies, for the winner of the scholastic and the A. A. U. divisions, would be awarded in addition to medals for first, second and third.

Fashion events nine for each division were scheduled, with trials in the scholastic 70-yard dash starting at 7:30 o'clock. Three events in which there will be necessary to reduce the field will follow. Crosby said he hoped getting under way before 8 o'clock.

Virginia Five Whips W.-L. Again, 45-39

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 24.—With the Big Six championship already locked up, Virginia's basketball team won from Washington and Lee here tonight, 45-39, to make it two straight over the Generals, 1940 State champions.

The victory gave the Cavaliers a record of nine wins against one loss in State competition. The lone setback was administered by Virginia Military Institute, 42-39, but later the Virginia quint swamped the Keydets, 49-26.

Four thousand fans, largest crowd ever to witness a basketball game here, attended the game, which proved exciting from start to finish. While McCann's field goal, scored in the first 30 seconds of play, put the Cavaliers into a lead which was never overtaken, the Generals were dangerous throughout the first half.

Virginia's Co-Capt. Bill Harman, in his last game, gave a superb exhibition, registering 27 points, which brought his season's total to 351 and gave him scoring honors among "Big Six" players. Runnerup was Glenn Know, of William and Mary, with 320 points.

Dick Pinck, of Washington and Lee, all-State forward, was high scorer for the Generals, with 14 points. Close on his heels was Ligon, with a total of ten points.

Walter Haight Goes Local

Washington, D. C.

Dear Jake,

I hope everything in Florida ain't so pretty good as usual.

I was glad to hear that you hit big daily double, but don't write me any more letters about my coming back that damn tropical paradise. What do I care for your word pictures of palm trees, coral islands, afternoons on the sand, nights under the stars, soft music and blondes? Not me, Jake, you can have your Florida. There's no chance of me coming down there for next Saturday's big race. I have resolved never to go to Florida again. On that subject, my mind is made up as strong as a cobweb.

"Not Haight"

I was feeling sorry for you the other afternoon. I was sitting in our living room. The heat was coming up and our oil was going down and I said to myself, "Poor Jake is wandering around that Hialeah paddock taking a chance on getting a sun stroke and I'm lolling here on the davenport listening to the homey old North wind whistling around the side of the house."

If you want me to, I'll have a record made of it and send it down.

It's a long time, Jake, since the trees did their striptease, but everything around here points to spring. Somebody in the suburbs reported they saw Robin Redbreast yesterday. I investigated and I have come to the conclusion that it was a starling that had been sleeping too near a Neon sign. However, it could be a Department of Agriculture experiment. I wonder if those guys are planting robins equipt with a heater, a radio and a gill of anti-freeze?

Now, Jake, you know how you stand with me. You are A, No. 1 and tops in my book. You are always trying to boost me and I appreciate it. However, I wish you had consulted me before you hit upon that scheme of yours to make me famous by sending letters to the Editor. It was bad enough to have the boss receive a thousand in one morning, but when he discovered they were all the same circular letters he began to smell a rat and Art Brown was out of town.

I did like your reference to my Manhattan story and also the playing up of that Key West trip, but when you praised that yarn about the parlay on "Freesy Sneesy and Shady Sady" you were wetter than Dave Herman thinks he isn't, because that was one of my Florida letters that the boss did not print.

Also, it was nice of the boys on Ninth Street to cooperate with you. I appreciate the fact that they mailed them individually to make them look good, and it wasn't your fault, but every one of those guys used the same hotel envelopes. In addition, half of them spelled my name "Hate" and one of them scribbled on the bottom, "P. S.—I got a good thing going in the sixth at Hialeah Friday. How about betting two for yourself and ten for me?"

I guess you haven't heard about it but Al[illegible] (Mowlee) Clarke has named a horse Walter Haight. I took the family out to Clark's farm to see the horse last Sunday. When we drove up, the kids hopped out and ran toward the barn. Before the little lady and I were on the ground they ran back shouting, "We've seen Pop."

Well, Jake, I laid the law right down to that Clarke before I left the farm. His place is popular with the horsemen and he has hundreds of visitors every Sunday. Since I have been advertising the fact, a lot of people are coming out there to see this colt named Walter Haight. I told Clarke that I might even sue him if something wasn't done about it. I know I do a lot of kidding in these letters, but this time I'm serious.

That Clarke has got to do one of two things: Either he moves that pen with that 300-pound hog in it or he paint's a big sign on it, THIS AIN'T WALTER HAIGHT."

Peturbed,

Ex-Miami Haight

Greenberg Says He May Ask Temporary Draft Deferment

Detroit Star Reluctant To Speak

Heavy-Hitting Tiger Back From Vacation In Hawaii; Denies He Wants an 'Out'

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 24.—Big Hank Greenberg, back from a Honolulu vacation today, found himself still a central figure in baseball's biggest problem—military draft.

Sun-tanned and looking in first class shape, the tall, handsome star of the Detroit Tiger machine declared that:

He did not ask for deferment of the draft, as reported; and

He might ask for temporary deferment if his number were to come up during the coming baseball campaign.

Greenberg, possibly the most prominent eligible in baseball for military duty, was greeted off quarantine station by newsmen who boarded the liner Monterey. They found him at first reluctant to talk.

Straddles Fence

The heavy-hitting outfielder, upon whose mightly bat rests much of the hope of Detroit fans for another American League pennant, declared at the outset that he wouldn't deny or confirm reports that he had asked for deferment.

Then he added that the draft board "had no right" to say he had asked for a postponement, and as the Monterey docked, he hurried to a telephone. Returning, he said he had just called Detroit—presumably the Tigers front office—and asserted:

"Frankly, I haven't asked for deferment. But I might later on. My number is 621. I may not be called until July. So when my number is called, if it is in midseason, I may ask for deferment until October to avoid breaking into two seasons.

"I do not have any intention, however," he added emphatically, "of rtying to get out of military training."

Draft service is for one year. If called in mid-season, military service would keep him out of baseball during the 1941 pennant scramble, and the 1942 season as well.

He said he had learned in the call to Detroit that the draft numbers there had reached 300.

Greenberg booked a plane reservation on T. W. A. for New York, leaving at 6 p. m. today.

Cleveland Outfielder In Draft's Class 1-A

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 24 (AP).—Roy Bell, Cleveland Indian outfielder, has been placed in class 1-A by the District Selective Service Appeal Board.

Bell, a resident of New Braunfels, Tex., recently was placed in class 3-A by the local board, which ruled he had dependents. Henry P. Burney, chairman of the District Appeal Board, said today, the appeal body ruled Bell had no dependents and placed him in class 1-A, subject to immediate call.

Bell has passed his physical examination.

Bethesda Five Beats Landon School, 21-9

Stung by an upset beating in their first meeting this year, the basketball Barons of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High took ample revenge on Landon Prep's Cagers yesterday, winning 21-9 in a battle on Prep's floor.

The Barons were never behind after the first few seconds, improving their 8-3 first-period lead to 12-5 at the half and 16-6 after three quarters. Landon, which nipped B.-C. C. earlier in the season by 16-14 in one of the city's major scholastic upsets, fought valiantly throughout but couldn't match the tight zone defense and fast break of the winners.

Poerstel Leads

Bob Cremins, the Barons' most prolific scorer, saw only a few minutes of action as the invaders concentrated on defense, and scoring honors went to Dick Poerstel, youthful forward who missed the previous battle. He registered 10 points and second-best for the Bethesdans was Duke Hashegen with four points.

The victory was Bethesda's eighteenth in 23 games to date, and the loss was Landon's fourth in 18 games.

Leading the losers' offensive performance was towering Paul Baker, one of the District's highest scorers, with six of his team's nine points. His defensive play was also a standout.

Two of the outstanding seniors who will be in line for the Hartley award will be Nick Latsios, of the St. Mary's Club of Alexandria, and Walter "Buddy" Thomas, of the Prince Georges County Police Club.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 25.—What interests you?

BASEBALL?—If the Giants are trying to intimidate Hank Danning, by threatening to trade him to the Dodgers, they are taking exactly the wrong tack in their efforts to sandbag Holdout Hank into line. A few years ago any such threat would have been enough to bring a recalcitrant to his knees, begging to be spared that fate. But now the Dodgers represent practically the promised land. Ball players would rather work for L. S. MacPhail than for any other National League owner, for he is quick with a buck. For all their hardened attitude, too, players prefer to play in enthusiastic communities, and Brooklyn, of course, is beyond parrallel.

CONSIDINE

On the other hand, MacPhail is certainly sinking a dirk into the back of Mickey Owens' holdout hopes when he threatens to trade him to the Giants. That's a pretty harsh penalty for a mild case of rebellion. Even in Russia they don't send you to a salt mine for parking overtime. Anyway, times have certainly changed and it is now the Giants—once the goal of every player in captivity—which are now being held up to holdouts as the supreme penalty. The Dodgers had their unenviable reputation for years, then lost the title to the Phillies.

But banishment to the Phils has lost its sting. Players know that if they have a good year with Gerry Nugent's soulless organization they'll be peddled just as quickly as Nugent, who is strictly a breeder, can run to the nearest telephone. With the Giants, it's tougher to escape. And even after a player escapes, it takes him a year or two to thaw out from the effects of Bill Terry's last "Good mornings!"

TRACK?—That Sullivan award looked very natural in Greg Rice's hands. And that's news, for this golden fleece of undefiled amateurism more than once has found its way into the paws of some of the most deplorable mercenaries imaginable. Rice is a rare species. You may believe it or not, but he runs in those big Saturday night meets for nary a sou over his bare (and Spartan) traveling expense. A devout kid, he is convinced that it would be a sin for him to go the way of so many of his predecessors and grab a share of the big gate receipts which he helps to make possible. He is about the last of a vanishing breed, and our hat is off to him for his will power.

BOXING?—The crummy condition of the heavyweight division is once more made apparent to us by the fact that in training at the moment are Tony Galento and Max Baer, both of whom have enough talent left to remain what is called a "threat." It is nigh on to seven years (the lifetime of a fighter) since Baer lost his title to Jim Braddock. It is going on nine years since Galento was first called "washed up," a term which, of course, was not intended literally. Yet here they are still with us, still making menacing gestures, still ostensibly demanding a chance to fight for the title again.

In another era, some tough young man would have come along and dispatched such relics back to the farm or pub. It stands to reason that Max and Tony can't be nearly as good today as they were seven and more years ago. Deterioration sets in fast on fighters, and both these gladiators gaily augmented that natural cracking up as much as possible. Yet here they are, with Tony training to fight Buddy Baer and Max training to fight Lou Nova in bouts which will bounce them right back into title-match consideration if they are successful.

Where, then, are the young muggs who normally would be in the shoes of Baer and Galento? Ah . . . that's the rub. You can blame their absence on anything from the degeneration of the species to the flowering of culture. But if you know where there is a young 190-pounder with a good punch, a mind for absorbing the art of boxing, and a chin that has more bone in it than wedgewood, you can make yourself and him wealthy overnight. For the very presence of Baer and Galento on the boxing scene bespeaks the stunning dearth of new talent.

RACING?—Looks like Al Vanderbilt's fine colt, New World, son of Discovery, will miss the Derby and Preakness. He is being nursed along gently, perhaps with an eye toward the next two or three years. He isn't built for too much punishment—not that that would stop every horse owner—so Vanderbilt plans to bring him along easily. New World did not start as a 2-year-old until July of last year (whereas other 2-year-olds were raced as early as the previous January). He was 7-to-10 in his first race and won. He lost to Whirlaway in his second out, then beat Whirlaway, then blew his Futurity tryout and the Futurity itself after leading the rich race with the wire in sight.

New World's pap never got going until he was a 4-year-old, and the more weight they piled on him the better he seemed to like it. If New World is three-quarters the horse Discovery was, Vanderbilt will have a consistent winner. He knows this, of course, and has the dough and the patience to bide his time with a fast colt which, in other hands, might now be taking a beating at Hialeah or Santa Anita.

Nats' Rookie Parade

at Orlando

This is the first in a series of articles dealing with rookies with the Washington Nats at their training camp in Orlando, Fla. Other stories will appear from time to time in The Post.

1. SAM CUNNINGHAM, Pitcher.

It won't get him anywhere on the pitching mound, but he does hold a card in the C. I. O. Automotive Workers Union and was a paid-up member until he left Detroit a week ago to report to the Nats' camp. All winter he wrestled motors around on the testing block of the Chrysler Co.

CUNNINGHAM

He's a big redhead, 6 feet 3 inches tall, 22 years old and he weighs 175 pounds. He's a left-hander. He played high school ball in Detroit with Barney McCoskey, now of the Tigers, and was signed by the Nats last spring after being declared a free agent by Judge Landis. He had been playing at McKeesport, a Pirate farm in the Pennsylvania League, and he didn't think he was being promoted fast enough. He carried his case to Landis, winning status as a free agent when he revealed that the contract he had signed with the Pirates as a minor had not been countersigned by his mother.

He had an offer to sign with the Indians as well as the Nats and chose the Washington team because "Mr. Griffith's letter sounded better." Bucky Harris sent him to the mound twice in exhibition games in Orlando last spring. He shut out Kansas City in one three-inning turn and was murdered by Chattanooga in another three-inning job. The Nats' Charlotte farm got him when the Washington club broke camp.

He was hot stuff at Charlotte, winning six games and losing only one, when he was forced to quit in June on account of illness. "Mr. Griffith paid my salary for the whole season and my doctor's bills," he says. Those six victories in seven games at Charlotte caused the Nats to renew their interest in him, and he's down here to show what he can do. Like other young left-handers he is a bit shy on control, but says that will come with more work.

Bucky Harris likes his "action" and says he has a chance to stick with the Nats. Cunningham hopes that he can, because he says he needs the money. He supports his mother and says his father "is somewhere in the Army, we don't know where." He dresses like a fancy dan and has a marcel in his hair that would make him a ladies' day favorite.

25 Enter Table Tennis Meet

The first annual Southern States championship open table tennis tournament, scheduled to begin at the Ice Palace courts Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, got off to a running start today with the receipts of 25 entries, according to Lou Fields, manager of the Chevy Chase Ice Palace courts.

The tournament, which will be a ranking event, will be under the auspices of the District Table Tennis Association as sanctioned by the United States body, and the results will count for national ranking.

Local paddle-wielders are hurrying in their entries and 23 men and three women have signed up for the first classic of its kind to be held in the District. National stars such as Lou Pagliaro, national champion; Charles Schmidt, No. 3 ranking player; Sy Sussman, No. 4; Carolyn Wilson, Eastern women's champion, and Stanley Fields, top-ranking men's star of the District, have already entered and the 25 received yesterday brings the total to over the 30 mark.

Those entering Monday are:

Heath Arrives In Tribe Camp; To Talk Terms

By the Associated Press

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 24.—Jeff Heath, one of two Cleveland outfielders not yet signed to 1941 contracts, arrived at the Indians training camp today and will discuss terms with C. C. Slapnicka, club vice president.

Before Heath's arrival, Slapnicka said he had offered the outfielder "a contract which would make it possible to earn as much as he has been earning, but only if he can deliver as we believe him capable of delivering." Heath failed to meet club expectations the past two seasons.

The Tribe's vice president also disclosed that Outfielder Roy Weatherly—the only other unsigned player—wants a two-year contract. There's no contention about his value, Slapnicka said, but declared "we aren't dealing with anyone on a two-year contract basis this year."

Rosary Comes to Terms

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 24.—Buddy Rosar, second string backstop, agreed to 1941 salary terms today and took part in the opening workout as the New York Yankees began their spring training under dripping, gray skies.

Eleven Yankees are still unsigned. They included three pitchers, as many outfielders, one catcher and four infielders.

The initial workout lasted two hours and consisted of warming-up exercises, batting practice and an infield drill, during which Phil Rizzuto and Gerald Priddy, star infield combination up from Kansas City, were the center of attention.

Impatient Rookie

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 24.—Hurler Johnny Hutchings was a little premature today in donning a uniform of the World Champion Cincinnati Reds. He put it on before agreeing to terms for 1941. Manager Bill McKechnie ordered him into "civvies" and onto the sidelines until he was ready to talk turkey.

A few minutes later, Hutchings signed—and returned to the field with other pitchers and catchers for a brief, easy workout, interrupted by rain.

Browns Rained Out

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 24.—Cold weather and wet grounds—that bugaboo of baseball—prevented the St. Louis Browns from beginning spring training today.

Manager Fred Haney had called the pitchers and catchers to the park at 11 o'clock. But after he walked out from the clubhouse to centerfield over soggy, slippery turf, he canceled the practice, gave the boys a pep talk and suggested they take a long walk.

Dykes Satisfied

Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 24.—Manager Jimmy Dykes, defying the California "mist," sent his 25 Chicago White Sox players through their initial spring training drill today.

The session included a bit of calisthenics, running and throwing with frequent interruptions by photographers.

Dykes, between puffs of his omnipresent cigar, said "we look like we'll be all right this year," and added:

"Everything is fine so far and I'm well satisfied with the material we've got."

Mueller Signs With A's

Philadelphia, Feb. 24.—Two more signed contracts arrived at the Phillies' office today.

The contracts came from Second Baseman Emmett Mueller and Roy Bruner, a right-handed pitcher who played last year with the Baltimore club in the International League.

Pitcher Vito Tamulis, who played with the Brooklyn Dodgers last year, and Third Baseman Merrill May continued to hold their contracts. Training starts March 1 at Miami Beach.

May in Phils' Fold

Philadelphia, Feb. 24.—Merrill May, star third baseman of the Phillies, has signed his 1941 contract, President Nugent of the Phils, announced today. May previously had returned his contract unsigned asking for more money.

Nugent also said that at the suggestion of Pitcher Hugh Mulcahy a rookie pitcher, Herman Shufro, of Dorchester, Mass., would be given a tryout at the Phils training camp in Miami Beach, Fla.

Bite Put on Mack

Anaheim, Calif., Feb. 24 (AP).—Rookie Catcher Morris Hancken told Connie Mack on the telephone today that he had signed his contract and would Connie please mail transportation money to Beaumont.

Runs, Hits & Errors

By SHIRLEY POVICH

(All communications to this department should be addressed to Shirley Povich, Angebilt Hotel, Orlando, Fla.)

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 24.—More consideration for Catcher Al Evans in the Nats' training camp is the demand of Washington fan John L. Varner, of 4900 Fourth Street Northwest, who writes:

"Why doesn't Evans get a break on the Washington ball club? The few times that they used him last year he proved that he was a better hitter than either Jake Early or Rick Ferrell, and we never saw anything wrong with his catching. And after watching Ferrell on the base lines it was a relief to see in Evans a catcher who could run faster than a trot.

"I don't know how many games Evans played in but I notice that he hit .364, which is almost a hundred points more than either Ferrell or Early. I'll never understand why Bucky Harris doesn't use him oftener. Is Evans antisocial or something?"

COMMENT—Bucky Harris would be a very happy man if Evans were all that you suspect he is. He's not exactly pleased with either Jake Early or Rick Ferrell as his regular catcher. There were times last year when Harris called all of the pitches for Early from the bench, and he'd appreciate a better hitting catcher than Ferrell. The fact is that Harris this year is high on Evans, who may share the regular catching duties with Ferrell, except when Dutch Leonard is throwing his knuckle ball. Harris doesn't believe that Evans is a .364 hitter, incidentally. He'll settle for a nice .290 average for Al.

Chase Rated Tops

Not Sid Hudson or Dutch Leonard, but Ken Chase is the best pitcher on the Washington club, according to Leslie L. Mosler, of Colonial Village, Va., who in a letter to this department described himself as a "Chase fan."

"Someday the Washington baseball writers will realize that Chase is the best man on the Washington pitching staff," writes Mosler. "Hudson and Leonard monopolized most of the write-ups last season, but the fellow who was pitching the best ball was Chase. It didn't surprise me to learn at the finish of the season that he had the best earned run average on the team, and was up near the league leaders in that respect.

"I respect Chase for the courage he shows others on the mound. I saw him walk 13 Yankees in one game and still beat them. With men on bases he bears down harder than any pitcher in the league, and he loses more tough games than any other pitcher. So how about giving a real good pitcher a break in your write-ups. I don't know Chase personally, but I'd like to because he's my kind of a guy."

COMMENT—You're correct about that, brother, and the person who doesn't admire Ken Chase has no appreciation of some of the finer qualities of manhood. Unlike other Washington pitchers, I've never heard him emit a single beef o squawk, no matter how tough a game he lost. If he blamed anybody he blamed himself. It certainly wouldn't take a great stretch of the imagination to recognize Chase as the best pitcher on the Washington team last year.

The remarkable thing about Chase's pitching was that until last season he was trying to get by mainly on his speed. But he came up with a curve that was a beaut, and there were times when he was breaking off as clever a curve ball as any man in the league. He had control of that curve, too. I don't think you'd find it hard to convince Bucky Harris that Ken Chase is the best left-hander in the American League.

Frank Kimbrough Is Baylor Coach

Waco, Tex., Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Frank Kimbrough, 37-year-old brother of All-America Quarterback John Kimbrough, of Texas A. & M., was named head football coach at Baylor University today by the athletic committee of the board of trustees.

The committee declined to reveal the length of his appointment, or the amount of salary "as a matter of permanent policy."

No Garden Bid Likely for Any District Five

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A report that the winner of next week's Georgetown-George Washington basketball game probably would get a bid to the New York Sportswriters' Championship Tournament was branded as false yesterday as dates for the annual event were set for March 18, 19, 22, 24.

Colonial and Hoya supporters are each hopeful of seeing their favorites in the mythical national championship event although each team has lost three games and has two tough assignments remaining, G. W. against St. John's, and the Hoyas and G. U. against Fordham and G. W.

A New York source close to the tournament committee declared nothing had been said of the G. W.-Georgetown winner meriting a Garden invitation. Georgetown Coach Ripley was told several weeks ago, when his team was compiling an 11-game winning streak, that if the Hoyas maintained their pace they would likely be in Madison Square Garden for the tournament, but they have lost twice since that date.

Seven Games This Week

The Hoyas beat G. W. by 8 points in their first meeting and their schedule has been much tougher than the G. W. card, dotted with a dozen Southern Conference foes whose records are none too good. If any local team is under consideration, Georgetown is the most logical, although next week's meeting could alter the picture.

The waning season finds only seven games for the local cagers this week with American University holding the spotlight. The Eagles have a triple ambition as they wind up their card: of beating the University of Mexico in its last game in this country; finishing the season above the .500 mark, and sending Dutch Schulze off in rousing fashion after his four starring years under Coach Cassell.

The Eagles invade Westminster tonight for a Mason-Dixon Conference clash with Western Maryland, a previous conqueror. Thursday they entertain the traveling Mexicans and Saturday they conclude the season by entertaining Johns Hopkins in another conference encounter.

Notables To Attend

Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera and the Mexican Embassy staff will attend Thursday's contest, the last international game for the travel-weary 10-man squad. It will be the twenty-ninth game for the visitors, who have traveled 12,000 miles. They have won eight.

The Eagles have won five out of 12 to date and must sweep the last three games or give Coach Staff Cassell his first losing season. Schulze will make his final home appearance Saturday night.

Catholic University will conclude its better-be-forgotten season to-

Fade and Albatross Each Victor in Hialeah Dinner Stakes

46-Day Meet Opens Final Week's Card

Gen. Jean Second In First Division Of Dinner Stakes; Arcaro Rides Double

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Feb. 24.—Fade, a fast and game filly, owned by Mrs. Payne Whitney, frequently referred to as "the first lady of the American turf," defeated 15 other 2-year-olds in the first division of the Miami Jockey Club Dinner Stakes as the final week of the 46-day meeting began today.

The daughter of Mr. Bones, now winner of three out of four starts, the last three triumphs in a row, was a $8.40-for-$2 choice and led home Mrs. G. M. Odom's General Jean by a nose. Mrs. Edward S. Moore's Sir War was third, a half-length behind. The time was 0:33 4-5.

This was the ladies' division of the stakes, while the men's silks were sported in the second half. According to the conditions of the 3-furlong dash for juveniles, a subscriber not owning a horse may lease one, registering his or her colors for the event. The two winners are feted by the subscribers at a formal dinner in the clubhouse in the evening, at which time two gold cups are presented. All subscription fees go into the dinner fund.

General Jean was leased from Allen T. Simmons. Fade and Sir War represented their original owners.

Fade Easy Winner

Fade, piloted by Eddie Arcaro, dashed right to the front and continued in the van all the way under a powerful ride. The filly had General Jean as her chief menace throughout the bitterly contested straight run and just lasted. General Jean might have won in another stride. He also closed with fine courage while staving off the forward running Sir War. Kind Gesture was the best of the others.

Albatross, considered the best 2-year-old uncovered here this winter, made his record three straight victories when he easily led home seven others in the men's division of the Dinner Stakes. Held at the prohibitive odds of 1 to 4, the chestnut gelding by Mate—Lull romped home by three lengths, running the 3 furlongs in 0:33 2-5 under top weight of 122 pounds, with Irving Anderson up. The strapping youngster represented Elmer Dale Shaffer, who, with Trainer Jack Howard, owns the Coldstream Stable.

The latter, quickest away, displayed the most speed, but could not stave off the winner's bid when the final issue came. SUBURA, a forward contender on the inside, was unable to better her position when placed to a drive. ROSE RED raced wide all the way.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:40½. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's b. f. (3), by Pompey—Sparky. Trained by W. E. Martin. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPANG, $5.20, $4.30, $3.00; TREADON, $9.30, $6.70; CHANCE RUN, $5.40.

SPANG, slow to find her stride, secured clear passage along the inner rail, moved up steadily rounding the lower turn and, assuming command in the stretch, outstayed TREADON. The latter, forced to race wide all the way, bore out through the stretch but for which she may have won. CHANCE RUN took a brief lead on the stretch turn, but faltered in the final drive. STINGALING finished stoutly.

Daily Double, CHORUS and SPANG, Paid $472.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FADE, $6.40, $4.00, $3.30; GENERAL JEAN, $7.40, $5.50; SIR WAR, $4.50.

FADE outbroke the field, opened up a good lead the first quarter mile and just lasted under extreme pressure. GENERAL JEAN, nearest in pursuit of the leader throughout, finished gamely and would have won in a few more strides. SIR WAR, prominent from the start, was caught in tight quarters between the leaders through the stretch. KIND GESTURE dwelt and ducked to the inside when the break came. She finished with good courage, but could not obtain clear racing room.

FOURTH RACE—Three furlongs (nursery course). Purse, $2,000; allowances. The Miami Jockey Club Dinner Stakes (gentlemen subscribers). For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:44. Off at 3:45½. Winner, E. D. Shaffer's ch. g. (2), by Mate—Lull. Trained by J. Howard. Value to winner, $1,500; second, $250; third, $150; fourth, $100. Time, 0:33⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALBATROSS, $2.50, $2.50, $2.20; CURIOUS ROMAN, $6.60, $2.60; SMALL TIME, $2.30.

ALBATROSS drew out at once and, rated in front, won with speed in reserve. CURIOUS ROMAN, always in nearest pursuit of the leader, held the others safe. SMALL TIME responded gamely to strong pressure and wore BLOSSOM LANE down. The latter had no excuses.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:11. Off at 4:11½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIPTED CLOUDS, $9.80, $5.40, $3.50; SIR GIBSON, $5.60, $3.60; VISIGOTH, $6.00.

RIPTED CLOUDS held the field safe for speed, opened up a long lead rounding the turn, but then faltered and was under brisk pressure at the end. SIR GIBSON moved up strong between the leaders in the final 3 furlongs, but could not overhaul the winner. VISIGOTH came from far back in the last furlong. WILLIAMSTOWN raced evenly. ARMOR BEARER showed little.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,400. The Sarasota, Grade C. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:39½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AIR BRIGADE, $6.30, $2.60, $2.40; FETTACAIRN, $2.50, $2.30; DAWN ATTACK, $3.30.

AIR BRIGADE, vigorously urged from the start, shook off his opposition leaving the backstretch and, opening up a winning lead entering the stretch, was eased up at the end. FETTACAIRN followed in nearest pursuit of the leader, but faltered through the stretch and just lasted long enough to stave off DAWN ATTACK'S bid. The latter saved much ground turning into the stretch, but found in the final drive. IRISH DAY was under pressure from the start, but could never get up.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:07. Winner, J. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUTBOARD, $35.00, $14.30, $6.40; PATSEY BEGONE, $4.80, $3.60; NOODLES, $3.50.

OUTBOARD, under stout restraint and saving ground in the early running, came around the leader in the final furlong, took command and won going away. PATSEY BEGONE, rated in front while saving ground, made a game effort when challenged, but was not good enough. NOODLES closed a good gap in the last half mile to dispose of MIGAL FAY. The latter, a forward contender early, weakened in the last eighth.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (turf course). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:36½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY LYONORS, $8.40, $4.50, $3.50; BONZAR, $9.00, $5.60; SHAUN G., $4.50.

LADY LYONORS, outrun in the first half mile, responded with a rush when called upon to engage the leaders and just got up in time under hard urging at the close. BONZAR, off slowly, went into contention on the far side and made a bold bid in the drive and just missed. SHAUN G., a forward factor right from the start, assumed a short lead in the stretch, but weakened in the final stages. GALWAY, outrun early, came with good courage through the last sixteenth.

Dear Al:

The boys and girls are still sending in their versions of that Big Pebble-Day Off thing. Here's what L. K. has to say about it: "L. J. M. must be giving a decision for the benefit of some chiseling handbook maker who is doing business on a short bankroll and cannot afford to lose a bet. Why not be logical with your plain horse sense. The bet was made on the entry in the McLennan race. The race was divided, i. e., hlaf on Day Off and Therefore the bet should be divided. i. e., half on Get Off and half on Big Pebble. Why not give the playing sucker an occasional break." I pass. The Jamaica track in New York is preparing big business and will have one of the largest mutuel department layouts in the country with 247 ticket sellers and 200 cashiers. Speaking of mutuels, Donald Hay, the boss at Bowie, Charles Town and Marlboro, is visiting at the Oaklawn track. Dr. Dudley King, dentist, aviator and turf fan, flew to Hialeah from Washington last Saturday to see the Flamingo Stakes. He was accompanied by Dr. James McGuirk and Mrs. McGuirk, also of Washington. Jockey John Harrell flew ot California last weekend to ride. Here's some notes on the $50,000 Widener, the race that climaxes the meeting at this track: 16 starters have lined up at the barrier twice—1937 and 1940 . . . smallest field 1939, seven starte. . . . War Admiral, only topweight to score, carried 130 pounds in 1938 . . . richest renewals, 1937 and 1940. Many Stings and Columbians each earned $52,000 . . . four thoroughbreds that ran last year are eligible this year, namely, Many Stings, 1940 winner, Big Pebble, second in 1940, The Chief and Day Off . . . Two post-time favorites have won, Many Stings and War Admiral, Stagehand finished third in 1939 when odds-on, Finance was second in 1937 and the Sablin-Stand Pat entry, third in 1936 . . . no rider has ever won two renewals. BILL.

First race—I'm going to take NOTES again, and if he fails this time I'm going to give him to the Seminole Indians. He is a doubtful starter but will be on the outside if he gets into action. ISLAM'S ISLAM has speed despite that "double talk" name and will be close. MORE ROMAN for the show end.

Second race — MOONFOLLY shapes up as well as anything in this rather open race. Nash will do the riding and I'm going to string along. KLEIG LIGHTS has plenty of speed and will be a keen factor. CONSCRIPT to take care of the others.

Third race — ROYAL RUBY II packs 120 pounds but has a good chance to get home under Arcaro's handling. Breaks off the rail and has the speed to make the most of the position. WISE DEAN is good now and belongs with this company. INGOMAR for the show end.

Fourth race—REHEARSAL gets another chance. Equipped with light weight, McCreary will do the booting, and I'm going to be there. SPEED TO SPARE either quits or wins and he's hard to guess. BRIGHT TRACE'S last was a fine try.

Fifth race—EQUISTONE appears best at the weights in this sprint. Likes the track and has the speed. SWEET WILLOW is good, but the weight may be too much. GREAT ALBERT to take care of the minor award.

Sixth race—After his McLennan victory, BIG PEBBLE deserves the call here. Runs coupled with GET OFF. THE CHIEF and SHIP BISCUIT to fill out the money circle.

Seventh race—TOPEE shapes up well in this turf course event. Alfred Robertson will do the riding and I'm going to string along. TONYPANDY returned to form with a bang-up job last out and is a threat. FRANCES KEENE'S feather assignment and her liking for the going makes her dangerous.

Eighth race—Bell Helen could awake and take the chief money in a field of this kind. The 102 pounds suits. SIR REG fits in this field and will be close. GOURMET for the show end.

Best Bet—TOPEE.

Wolcott Will Compete in C. U. Meet

Ace Hurdler Is First Big Star to Enter

Texan to Run 45-Yd. Event Here March 10 At Uline Against Best Available Foes

Fred Wolcott, the world's greatest hurler, will compete here in Catholic University's eighth annual indoor track and field meet at Uline's Arena, Monday night, March 10, Arthur J. Bergman, director of athletics at Catholic University announced yesterday.

The big Texan star, a student at Rice Institute is the first of several nationally known track stars expected to appear in the city's biggest track event of the year and what will be by far the finest of all C. U. meets.

Wolcott has entered the 45-yard high hurdles event, a new attraction to the meet this year and Track Coach, Dorsey J. Griffith, director of the meet, announced that the ablest array of talent available will be called upon to force Wolcott give out with his best.

Ranked among the country's hurdlers, the blond timber topper holds both the 110-yard high hurdles and the 220 low hurdles national A. A. U. championships. He has lost but one event in the hurdles, that to Ed Dugger, of Tufts, last year. Since then, Wolcott has scored over the Tufts star twice, beating him by a yard in the annual Millrose A. A. games held in New York's Madison Square Garden early this month.

Wolcott broke the world mark by a tenth of a second in winning the 60-yard event in the Millrose games in 0:72.2. In the Penn A. C. meet in Philadelphia, the Texan lowered the record for the 50-yard event, winning in 0:61.1, and shattered the time for the 45 by traveling the distance in 0:56.6 in the Boston A. A. All these feats were accomplished in one week.

Y.M.C.A. Five Wins in A.A.U. Court Tourney

Though play was fast and exciting, the results of games were pretty much as anticipated last night as the D. C. A. A. U. Basketball Tournament went through its first four battles at Heurich gymnasium.

Most interesting engagement was that between the Y. M. C. A. five and Gallinger Athletic Club, won by the former, 47 to 42. At halftime the hospital quintet held a 24-to-19 margin, but in the last two periods the "Y" staged a winning rally behind the speeedy scoring of Heuer and Harrison. The first got 18 points and the latter 10.

Hostilities were opened by the Sphinx Silent's 51-to-43 triumph over Mount Vernon. Most of the clash was close, but the winners pulled away safely in the final period.

In other games Census Bureau tripped Bethesda-C. C., 38 to 34, and Petworth Athletic Club smashed Bellman Fuel, 69 to 39.

The schedule today calls for four more games, starting at 7 p. m.

Steinborn Added To Rassle Card

Hoping to be in a position to challenge the winner of Thursday night's championship match at Turner's Arena between Ray Steele, National Wrestling Association titleholder, and the Green Hornet, mysterious masked grappler, will be Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Strong Man. Steinborn was booked yesterday for a special 30-minute bout against Joe DeValteau, French refugee wrestler, and immediately asked Promoter Turner to put on file a challenge to the winner.

Steinborn holds a victory via disqualification over The Hornet and has an enviable record locally in 13 matches.

Also slated for action Thursday night are Fred Grobmier, the lanky scissors expert, and Abe Yourist, who meet in a 30-minute battle. The semiwindup shows Ernie Dusek, disqualified last week in 43 minutes in his bout with The Hornet, seeking redemption in a battle against Paul Boesch, of California.

Sidwell Friends' Newmeyer Leads High School Scorers

Accounting for a total of 27 points in two games last week, Armand Newmyer, 1940 scholastic scoring champion of this vicinity, from Sidwell-Friends School, grabbed the 1941 lead last week in The Post's computation of individual standings.

Eighteen points against St. James and nine against Petersburg High brought the clever little cager's total to 152 points in 14 games, an average of 10.86 in each. Franny Counselman, Gonzaga forward who led last week, dropped to second with a 10.04 average. And Tech's Jackie Walsh, who was out in front for more than a month, slid still farther down to eleventh with an 8.73 average.

Despite being forced to relinquish first place, Counselman clung to the total points lead with 208, two games last week accounting for 19. From a fifth place he has held steadily since the start of the season, Hymie Perlo, Roosevelt's stellar forward jumped into third position, and Paul Baker, Landon center, dropped down a notch to fourth.

Attention Marvin

Gene Buffalo Held to Draw By Phil Furr

Then came the fireworks. At the opening of the second round, both boys missed in midring and fell to the floor. They came up swinging, and Phil drove Buffalo back into the ropes with a two-handed attack which had the Philadelphian on the run. Buffalo fought his way out and nailed Furr on the point of the chin with a left.

Furr came out in the third and was set back twice by Buffalo's stabbing left hand. He shot back a left hook in return and pumped across a right hand to Buffalo's cheekbone, but Phil was fighting desperately for an early knockout and Gene just didn't seem in the mood.

Some Weird Doings

The preliminary business trotted out a number of dusky characters named Buddy, who put on a weird exhibition of fist-throwing that constantly had Referee Ray Bowen on the jump to keep out of the way.

In what was scheduled to be the night's first six rounder, Buddy Moore, local colored lightweight, was cooled off in one minute of the second round by Philadelphia's Golden Gloves graduate, Johnny Thomas, Johnny slapped Buddy dizzy from all angles and Bowen halted it at the crucial point, calling it a technical knockout.

The second six rounder brought out Washington's reformed welterweight, Buddy Thomas, in a renewal of his mixed-bout feud with Buddy Holmes, local middleweight. It was a sad exhibition that saw Thomas constantly on the receiving end, but when it was all over the judges called it a draw.

Alexander Victor

Carroll Alexander, pride of Alexandria, continued his victory march in the pro ranks, by flooring Wayman Stewart, colored Philadelphia lightweight, in the first round with a fast-moving right cross and then counter-punching his way to a decision.

The supply of guys named Buddy exhausted, Turner produced a substitute for the night's semi-final—an eight-rounder, with the Harlem touch that saw Eddie Wilson, White Plains, N. Y., hit Bill Guy, of New York, with everything but Announcer Jimmy Lake's microphone. Bill floated to the canvas in the third round under a two-handed attack. He managed to go the distance but took a terrific beating and lost the decision.

morrow night against Washington College, on the Eastern Shore court. Losers of 11 straight, the Cards have victory hopes as they gave the Shoremen a close game up here, and, too, Washington was Maryland's lone victim in 22 starts.

Fordham Tough

Georgetown visits Fordham's gym Friday night, in New York, and must add the Rams to its victims to keep its Sportswriters' tourney hopes alive. Fordham has won 10 times in 17 starts and has a good reputation on its home court.

Wilson Teachers College will make its final appearance of the season Saturday, meeting Newark State Teachers in the New Jersey bailiwick.

Out of the Southern Conference tournament for only the second time in Coach Burton Shipley's 18-year coaching regime, and ineligible for the first, the University of Maryland courtmen packed away their equipment yesterday after a sorry season.

The Terps lost 21 straight before finally beating Washington College Saturday night. The victory of the Terp freshmen over Georgetown's frosh last week heartened the Terps for next year, however. One thing is certain, their record can hardly be worse.

Gallaudet's 13-game card was concluded Saturday with four victories and nine defeats.

Next Wednesday's Georgetown-George Washington clash will be the last game of the season here and it is expected to pack Riverside Stadium to its capacity. Monday night G. W. tackles St. John's of Brooklyn at Riverside.

Bluefield Five Beats Howard

Bluefield College defeated Howard University, 51-44, in a C. I. A. A. League game last night in the local gym, shoving the losers into sixth place in the nine-team loop.

Bob Gunn scored 22 points at center for the visitors. Bluefield took a 29-18 lead at halftime and Howard whittled the advantage in the second half but could only get within seven points.

The Howard scoring was well divided, with Jackson high with eight points.

Hancken is the last of the A's to sign. Outfielder Dee Miles arrived and said he is "in fine shape."

Mungo Impressive

Havana, Feb. 24.—Chuck Dressen's "Whites" beat Red Corriden's "Grays" 9 to 4 today as the Brooklyn Dodgers played their first intra-camp game of the spring training season before 2,233 fans. The Cubans didn't see much major league baseball as the Corridens made eight errors and gave away seven unearned runs. The winning team was composed of second-string players with the exception of Joe Medwick in left field.

Van Mungo pitched two innings for the Grays in impressive style. He allowed only one solid hit and showed excellent control. Manager Leo Durocher commented afterward, "he really had something on the ball, and he was throwing with the old free overhand motion."

Three More Giants Sign

Miami, Feb. 24.—The New York Giants roped in three more signed contracts today—those of First Baseman Babe Young, Outfielder Joe Moore and Buster Maynard, rookie outfielder—leaving five players unsigned. Of these, only Brugess Whitehead hasn't been heard from. Bob Carpenter reached camp today and Harry Danning and Joe Orengo have sent word they are on their way to talk things over. Jack Brewer got in touch with Manager Bill Terry by telephone.

Today's practice was limited to batting and fielding drills as the players worked out the kinks resulting from Sunday's intrasquad game.

Bees Shift Drill Site

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 24.—The Boston Bees were forced to abandon their semicompleted training site and transfer operations to Alamo Stadium today to get in their opening workout.

Manager Casey Stengel limited the drills to tuning up legs and arms, but such pitching veterans as Wes Ferrell, Bill Posdel and Lefty Joe Sullivan insisted on bearing down much harder than the other chuckers.

From Boston, President Bob Quinn reported that Infielder Henry Majeski had come to terms and that ever player on the roster was signed. He will report here next week with the infielders and outfielders.

Cards Work in Rain

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 24.—After gulping the management's vitamin B1 tablets, 19 St. Louis Cardinals defied a light rain today to take part in the first workout of the 1941 spring training season.

Fifteen pitchers, two catchers, First Baseman Johnny Hopp and Outfielder Terry Moore took part in the drills. The latter two were not scheduled to report until Thursday.

Sox Hurlers Warned

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 24.—Before opening the Boston Red Sox's 1941 spring training season today, Manager Joe Cronin outlined to his young pitchers the club's dire need for winners and warned that the battle for berths would be a "survival of the fittest."

The veteran Lefty Bob Grove took his turn on the mound during brief batting practice, much to the distress of the batters. Catcher Frank Pytlak arrived too late to drill.

Little Hoyas Turn Tables On St. John's

The identical margin by which it lost to St. John's High earlier in the season was Georgetown Prep five's edge yesterday as it tripped its Catholic Prep rival on the Garrett Park floor.

After a bitter back-and-forth struggle, the Little Hoyas won, 48-47, when Bill Cremen, improving forward, sunk one from midcourt. The triumph virtually clinched a place in the Metropolitan Tourney for the Little Hoyas.

Cremen managed for the winning points, but most of yesterday's honors went to diminutive Ben Decker, Cremen's mate at forward, who with 20 points, came within three of the season individual point record. Bud Eckrich, grid star, added 11 more points in the winners' behalf.

Colonial Stores, Inc., which operates food outlets in the Virginia area, yesterday reported sales in 1940 totaled $46,239,556, an increase of 15 per cent over the $40,079,757 recorded in 1939. Net income for the year after taxes was $633,788, against $535,499.

Equitable Life Insurance Co.

An average of $561,290 a day was paid out by the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States in benefit payments to policyholders and beneficiaries in 1940, according to the annual report made public yesterday. Total benefit payments for the year amounted to $205,432,000.

Thomas I. Parkinson, president of the society, reported new ordinary life insurance sales in 1940 amounted to $290,519,871 and new group insurance $90,011,508, making a total of $380,531,379. At the end of the year the Equitable had $4,772,825,860 of ordinary insurance and $2,364,094,782 of group insurance in force, a total of $7,136,820,642. The lapse and surrender rates in 1940 were the lowest in 20 years.

Pointing out that interest rates have become the most important single factor affecting life insurance costs today, the report states that during the past 10 years there has been an increase in the amounts available for distribution to policyholders as dividends from mortality savings and expense provisions, but that the amount available from interest earnings, in contrast, has steadily declined. The earnings rate on the society's assets declined from 3.38 per cent in 1939 to 3.27 per cent in 1940, reflecting the decline in general interest rates to all-time lows.

The Equitable has set aside for payment in 1941 to members as policy dividends $33,508,570. The total of dividends paid since organization amounts to $1,043,517,000.

The society had $2,564,466,180 of assets at the year-end. Principal investments included U. S. Government obligations, $222,619,036; public utility bonds, $475,078,157; railroad bonds, $410,654,430; railroad equipment obligations, $46,542,585; industrial bonds, $259,887,483; other bonds, $60,476,866; preferred and guaranteed stocks, $48,560,059; first mortgages, $327,952,152; real estate, $154,703,074; and loans to policyholders, $216,989,036.

Provident Mutual Life

New paid business of the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia amounted to $70,118,000 in 1940, an increase of 5 per cent over the 1939 business, according to President M. A. Linton. Insurance in force at the end of the year amounted to $997,152,000, a gain of $17,109,000, which was 87 per cent above the corresponding figure for 1939. This increase was largely due to a marked decline in terminations, particularly including lapses and other voluntary terminations, which fell to an unusually low level in 1940.

Premium income was $34,427,000, a slight increase as compared with 1939. Payments to policy owners aggregated $27,676,000. Assets at the end of the year stand at $381,483,000, an increase of $17,770,000. During the year the amount paid to policy owners, plus the amount added to assets held for their benefit, aggregated $45,446,000, or $11,019,000 more than the premiums paid to the company.

London Stocks

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—Week-end news from the Balkans clouded price trends in the securities market today. Changes were small and the general undertone was steady.

Gold shares were offered from Johannesburg, and oils, with the exception of Shell Transport, tended downward.

Industrials overcame early lagging tendencies and finished quietly on an even footing. Profit-taking made further inroads on recent gains in domestic rails.

Most British Government bonds closed at weekend levels. In the foreign loan market South American issues recorded several losses.

Cotton Futures

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Cotton futures rose 4 to 14 points today as belief grew in the marketplace that farm income would be maintained this coming crop season without drastic changes in Federal farm policy.

This theory was rooted in part in Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's Saturday speech at Des Moines indicating he favored parity payments to farmers.

Worth street textile dealers reported good demand for heavy industrial and specialty fabrics, but problems hampered turnover. Routine inquiry developed for gray goods at firm prices.

Douglas Earns $18.05 a Share During Year

Top showing of companies reporting earnings yesterday was that of Douglas Aircraft Co. which revealed net last year of $18.05 a common share compared with $4.81 in 1939.

President Donald W. Douglas, at the same time, warned that certain adverse conditions and factors inherent in rapid expansion, and uncertainties of the future, made the big jump in net of temporary, if not secondary, importance.

The Douglas Co. reported a backlog as of November 30 of about $349,000,000, of which some $233,000,000 represented United States Government contracts, $80,000,000 foreign military orders and $36,000,000 domestic and foreign commercial purchasing. More than 80 per cent of the Federal business, it was understood, is in cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts in which profits before income and excess profits levies are smaller than on private business.

Although 1940 earnings amounted to $18.05 a share, $13.05 was retained in the business to finance inventories and other operating requirements. The $5 dividend was paid on the 600,000 shares outstanding and $3,219,851 was put back into new buildings, machinery and equipment to help the company meet national defense conditions and demands, the report stated.

Int. Harvester Co.

International Harvester Co. reported net income for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1940, of $23,161,110, equivalent to $4.11 a share of common stock after provision for preferred dividends.

Because of the spread of war conditions during 1940 the annual report was presented on a nonconsolidated basis, according to Sydney G. McAllister, president.

Placed on a comparable basis, net income for 1939 totaled $7,952,810.

Sales in the United States during 1940 rose 33.4 per cent, totaling $248,028,000 compared with $185,994,000 in 1939. Tractor sales increased 66 per cent, farm implements 24.5 per cent, motor trucks 16.1 per cent and a combination of all other products including steel and binder twine rose 35.8 per cent.

Stocks Stage Comeback in Final Hour; Leaders Gain Fractions to Two Points

New York, Feb. 24.—The stock market switched to the rallying side in the final hour today after moving listlessly over an irregular route during most of the proceedings.

While volume was nothing to cheer about, dealings picked up on the last-minute sortie and leaders closed with gains of fractions to 2 or more points. Steels, motors, aircrafts and assorted "blue chips" were among the best performers.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues emerged with a net advance of .5 of a point at 41.2. Transfers amounted to 347,730 shares compared with 298,590 last Friday. The turnover in the first four hours totaled only 170,000 shares.

Touching off the belated comeback, brokers said, was the introduction of a bill in the House to amend the excess profits tax law to relieve many hard-pressed corporations. In addition, some thought the Hitler speech indicated no immediate attempt at invasion of England, with the principal threat an intensification of submarine warfare. Business news was fairly encouraging but an important factor, it was suggested, was the drying up of selling which meant to many analysts that prices would respond to modest bidding.

An upturn in this week's estimated steel mill operations was seen as favorable and near-record production rates were expected for some time.

Propping sentiment also was a brisk upturn in wheat futures and other major commodities. Wheat at Chicago jumped 2¾ to 3⅝ cents a bushel and corn gained 1⅛ to 1½. Cotton was up 20 to 70 cents a bale. Bonds steadied after earlier mixed tendencies.

Among shares, Douglas Aircraft held an advance of 3¾ points in the wake of the best earnings statement in history. Many other corporation reports, however, were not so pleasing because they reflected exceptionally heavy tax outlays.

Prominnet stocks on the recovery included United States Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Chrysler, General Motors, United Aircraft, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Westinghouse, American Can, Du Pont, Johns-Manville, J. C. Penney, Texas Corporation, Anaconda, Kennecott and Montgomery Ward.

Sun Oil preferred dropped 4 points to 118 when it was learned shareholders would be asked to approve a new class "A" preference issue with a 4½ per cent interest rate. The present preferred is a 6 per cent stock and is callable at 115 and accrued dividends.

Jones & Laughlin was up 2⅛ in the Curb and lesser improvement was shown for Gulf Oil, Bell Aircraft, American Gas, Pantepec, Todd Shipyards and Venezuelan Petroleum. Lagging inclinations were exhibited by Glen Alden Coal, Electric Bond & Share and Humble Oil. Some 75,000 shares changed hands here against a preholiday aggregate of 81,000.

JudgeReversed For Name He CalledPlaintiff

The United States Court of Appeals here yesterday reversed a decision by Justice T. Alan Goldsborough because the record showed that Justice Goldsborough called the plaintiff a "son of a b——" when the case was being tried before him in the District Court.

Called the name was Norman T. Whitaker, during the trial of his $200,000 damage suit against Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean. Whitaker blamed Mrs. McLean for his arrest during investigation of the Lindbergh kidnaping. Justice Goldsborough ruled that Mrs. McLean was justified in giving Federal officers the information which led to Whitaker's arrest.

With this ruling, the appellate justices indicated sympathy, saying the record gave them the impression that Whitaker's claim probably was without merit.

Nevertheless, Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, Justice Justin Miller and Justice Henry W. Edgerton ordered a new trial for Whitaker because "a right to be tried by a judge who is reasonably free from bias is a part of the fundamental right to a fair trial."

The three appellate justices said Justice Goldsborough "may, as indeed he insisted, have felt no hostility to the plaintiff, and in that view he was, subjectively, free from bias. But bias must be considered objectively. Few, if any, judges would make the reported remarks in the couse of a trial unless they had developed definite and positive hostility to plaintiff and his case."

Twin Sons Run, Mother Won't Vote for Mayor

By the Associated Press

Waukegan, Ill., Feb. 24.—Neither President Roosevelt nor Gov. Dwight H. Green has signified any intention of issuing eleventh-hour decrees, so Mrs. Anna Kilbane won't vote in the municipal primary election here tomorrow.

She has twin sons, Harry and Frank. Harry is running for the Republican nomination for mayor. Frank is seeking the Democratic nomination for the same office.

The mother doesn't want to cast a ballot for one at the expense of the other, and the law won't permit her to give both sons her support at the polls.

So Harry phoned Gov. Green at Springfield and—as one good Republican to another—asked him to issue a proclamation enabling his mother to vote in both party primaries.

The Governor, Harry reported, related that he was very sorry, but it was against his policy to interfere in local elections.

Then Frank, the Democrat, dispatched a telegram to the President requesting him to issue a proclamation allowing his mother to vote for both of her sons.

Neither of the Kilbanes—they're 35 and partners in a tea room—made any predictions, but they agreed that the one receiving the smallest vote will work the night shift at their shop for the next six months.

Contract Bridge

Here is a chance for you to make the right play sitting opposite the opening leader, who this time is no less than Oswald Jacoby. You hold the East cards of today's hand against a four-spade contract. Ace Jacoby leads the king of clubs. How do you play our cards so as to defeat the contract? The answer is given below. Watch out, Jacoby may bite.

Today's Hand

SOUTH DEALER

	♠ J 9 6 3 ♡ Q J 9 ◇ A Q J ♣ 9 5 2
♠ 2 ♡ 7 3 ◇ K 10 9 7 5 3 ♣ K Q J 4	WEST NORTH EAST SOUTH	♠ A 7 4 ♡ 8 6 5 4 2 ◇ 4 ♣ A 8 6 3
	♠ K Q 10 8 5 ♡ A K 10 ◇ 8 6 2 ♣ 10 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ◇	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♣.

With the king of clubs led, East realizes that if he overtakes with his ace of clubs and leads his singleton diamond up to dummy's ace, queen, jack; he can win the first round of trumps with the ace and lead another club. (It is quite probable that declarer has another club because dummy has onl ythree.) This play will defeat the contract as West, winning the second club trick, will lead a diamond for East to ruff. By overtaking the king of clubs you can take four tricks: Two clubs, one spade and one spade ruff.

Another heir—the sixtieth within a little more than a year—has been discovered by the C. B. S. program, "The Court of Missing Heirs," which you hear over WJSV every Tuesday at 8 p. m.

The beauty of the discoveries is that practically invariably they turn out to be persons who really need the fortunes the 'Court" has found by delving into the records of probate courts throughout the country. Last week, you remember, the unknowing recipient of $6,500 left to him by a brother was an unemployed errand "boy" whose previous idea of luxury was getting a 40 cent-a-night room in New York's Mills Hotel. This week, the newfound heir is Francis Smith, 42, of Westmoreland, Kansas, also unemployed.

Smith is to get $8,500, left to him by an uncle a couple of years ago. Smith left his home in Kansas City, Missouri, in 1932 after his father's death and had failed to communicate with his relatives since. He didn't know his uncle had died until he was so informed by persons who had heard the "Court of Missing Heirs" broadcast which dramatized the case a few weeks ago.

He's going to make a special trip to New York so he can be on the "Court's" broadcast tonight to tell of his thanks and his plans for the $8,500.

With the location of Smith—No. 60 on the docket of discoverees—the "Court" has been responsible for restoring $386,000 to rightful owners.

Barlow, Inventor Of Bombs, Divorced

Reno, Nev., Feb. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Gertrude E. Barlow was granted a divorce today from Lester P. Barlow, Washington, D. C., explosives inventor, who did not contest the suit.

(Last September Barlow was awarded $502,000 by Congress for World War bomb patents, to end a legal battle which began in 1919. Later, the wife testified they had led "a hand to mouth existence and were always broke" because any money Barlow obtained "he would immediately put into some new invention or spend it on some lost political cause.")

Engineering Council Here Is Disbanded

Disbanding of the American Engineering Council, Washington "embassy" for 49 national, State and local engineering organizations for the past 20 years, was revealed yesterday by Col. I. B. Lent, former executive secretary of the council.

Although the council still exists as a corporation, it has ceased its functions at its headquarters, 919 Seventeenth Street Northwest, Col. Lent said. He held out hope for a reorganization of the council, however, pointing out that "the engineering profession must be represented in Washington."

Difference in Functions

A difference in the character of functions of the organizations represented in the council was the chief reason for disbandment, Col. Lent said.

National organizations affiliated with the council included the American Insitute of Consulting Engineers, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Association of Consulting Management Engineers, the Institute of Ceramic Engineers and the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education.

Studies undertaken by the council have resulted in the establishment of several Government bureaus here, Col. Lent said.

A study of waste in industry was instrumental in establishment of the division of commercial standards of the Buraeu of Standards, it was said, while early studies in problems of civil aeronautics helped lead to the founding of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Former President Hoover served as first president of the council in 1920 and 1921.

The move to disband the council began in June, 1940, when the American Society of Civil Engineers withdrew. The American Institute of Electrical Engineers withdrew shortly afterwards.

Seventeen State engineering societies and 29 local organizations were council members.

Exhaust Gas Death Called Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued by District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald late yesterday in the death of James W. Breeden, 24, found in a car parked in woods near Forty-sixth Street and Hanna Place Southeast. A rubber hose had been run from the exhaust pipe into the closed car.

Breeden, a car washer at the Washington Terminal Co., lived at 319 Fifth Street Northwest. He was identified by a fellow worker.

The coroner ordered the body taken to the District Morgue, and relatives were informed. No reason for the act could be discovered.

Randolph Heckled by G. O. P. As He Pleads for D. C. Suffrage

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, was heckled by Republican members of the House yesterday as he renewed his plea for District suffrage on the first District day of the seventy-seventh session of Congress.

Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, pointed out that although both parties and party leaders had indorsed District suffrage the House Rules Committee last year had bottled up the Sumners resolution.

After asking several questions as to whether the Sumners resolution makes any discrimination as to race or color, Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, suggested that it might well be extended "to cover the whole South."

"The Negroes vote in West Virginia," responded Randolph, "and that's below the Mason-Dixon line."

Representative Zimmerman (Democrat), of Missouri, asked Randolph if he thought the "founding fathers" were wrong when they decided to make the National Capital a voteless jurisdiction.

"Yes," said Randolph, "I do think they were wrong just as they were when they failed to give women the vote."

"There's a difference," retorted Zimmerman, "between giving the vote to our wives and sweethearts and to residents of the District."

Republican heckling of Randolph's suffrage address in the House immediately after the Democratic convention last summer led to the House Judiciary Committee report. There were no indications yesterday, however, that a similar reaction would occur this year.

Randolph, after pointing to the growth of the Capital in the last quarter of a century, said:

"I hold to the hope that in 1944 voteless citizens may exercise the franchise right along with other Americans."

The House passed three minor District bills without discussions. Briefly, they provide:

Prohibition against the introduction of contraband into District penal institutions; this law is similar to a statute applying to Federal prisons.

Amendment of the Union Railroad Station Act to permit the Commissioners to open minor streets across railway spurs or industrial tracks without requiring the railroad to build an overpass.

Strengthening of the act regulating plumbing to require that all plumbing or gas fitting requiring a license be done under the immediate supervision of the licensed man.

Randolph said, with regard to the street extension bill, that the Commissioners had assured him that ample safeguards will be taken to protect users of the highway.

Depression Lurks In 'Oversaving,' Ezekiel Warns

By the Associated Press

Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Secretary of Agriculture, told the Monopoly Committee yesterday that it would be necessary to prevent "oversaving" if a postdefense depression is to be avoided.

Ezekiel said he spoke "in my personal capacity as an economist," and not as a spokesman for the Agriculture Department.

"You can close the gap between savings and investment by the Government borrowing the hoarded savings and spending them," Ezekiel suggested.

He suggested that Government spending to absorb savings in excess of investment could be made without unbalancing the Federal budget by "using some form of interfree money or Government-created credit."

"The shift to any such system," he added, "would obviously involve a very serious shock to all of the financial institutions and to our fiscal and financial habits."

'America First' Officers Assemble

Officers of America Frist chapters in all sections of the country met yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel for the purpose, they said, of "getting acquainted with one another."

Gen. Robert E. Wood, national president, presided at the afternoon sessino. Reporters and photographers were excluded from the meeting.

'Course, I don't know all the dope, but the Counsellors at Camp say they're built "Nature's last," which means there's plenty of room for a fellow's toes to grow in.
